Fight to Halt City Airport Closing Stirs Both Houses

'Disgrace if City Is Left Without a Field,' Says McKellar.

Highway a Menace, Official Declares

Safe Route Is Sought to Landing Ground by Congress.

A double-barreled move to prevent closing of Washington Airport on February 15 got under way yesterday on Capitol Hill after the Postoffice Department announced it would be forced to transfer air-mail operations to Baltimore unless Military road is closed by an act of Congress in the interim.

Stunned by the thought that the National Capital may soon be without an airport, members of both the House and the Senate pledged their support to the joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to close Military road for the safety of both air line passengers and motorists.

Senator McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, announced he would introduce in the Senate a resolution similar to the McSwain measure in the House and ask that the Senate Military Affairs Committee act on it at once without waiting for the House to submit its resolution.

"We haven't any time to lose," he said. "This is an emergency. It will be a disgrace to the Federal Government if the National Capital is deprived of airport facilities and forced to send out its air mail from Baltimore. Besides, it will be extremely inconvenient and expensive."

King Calls Meeting.

In a surprise move last night, Senator William H. King, of Utah, called a special meeting of the Senate District Committee, of which he is chairman, for today to consider the emergency.

The committee will meet in the District committee room in the Capitol at 10:30 a. m. and hold open hearings to which Senator King has invited the District Commissioners and representatives of the Postoffice and Commerce departments to testify.

Chairman McSwain, of the House Military Affairs Committee, which will open hearings tomorrow, predicted that his resolution will be voted on by the House no later than Tuesday or Wednesday under a special rule if necessary.

Both McSwain and McKellar expressed the belief that the resolution may be sent to the White House in time for it to be signed by the President before Saturday, when the airport is due to be closed by order of the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Department of Commerce.

McSwain expressed willingness to support Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, in his efforts to insure the construction of a substitute road for the benefit of Arlington County if no other compromise can be obtained.

Expand to Hoover Field.

Samuel J. Solmon, manager of the Washington Airport, stated that he did not believe the owners of the port will agree to build a substitute road themselves. The War Department has stated that it no longer needs the highway and is consequently not interested in building another.

At the same time, Solomon predicted that the closing of Military road will lead to the expansion of Washington Airport into Hoover Field and the construction of modern runways that will make the airport one of the finest in the country.

Representative Dingell, of Michigan, made public a letter he had written to Secretary Dern in which he said:

"I predict a serious aerial catastrophe will occur, chargeable to the

If YOU Were President . . .

WHEN THE Supreme Court declared the AAA unconstitutional, a clamor went up for the President to make the chief issue of his campaign for re-election a constitutional amendment curbing the power of the Supreme Court.

WHAT would YOU do, if you were President?

FOR one thing, you would want to know the opinion of the Nation on the question. And the latest country-wide poll of the National Institute of Public Opinion will tell you that.

Weather Fair As Cold Eases Grip on Capital

Midwest Snowed Under as Floods Peril South; One Death Here.

Although Washington is in for a good break from the weather man, leftover ice yesterday took a life.

The Midwest is snowed under and the South suffering from both floods and cold, but this city basked yesterday in relative balminess.

While the thermometer only reached a high of 34, the day with its bright sun and calm air was a definite change for the better.

It was a change that will last at least two days. Today, the forecaster says, will be fair with temperature conditions the same.

Ice Claims Victim.

For tomorrow, cloudiness and possibly rain or snow at night are expected, but no mercury drop.

The victim of the ice was Ned Hall, 37, of Benning, a cableman of the Potomac Electric Power Co., who slipped on the ice and fell into Kingman's Lake.

Burdened by winter clothing, Hall was unable to grasp a rope thrown toward him by Ernest Dillard, of 239 Twelfth street southeast. He sank. The body was recovered, but resuscitation efforts were in vain.

A drowning tragedy was averted by the presence of mind of Stanley Seganish, 16, of 227 Ninth street southeast, who fell through the ice in the harbor last night as he and a companion, Norman Kenny, 17, of 333 Fourteenth street northeast, were walking on the frozen channel.

Youth Escapes Drowning.

Seganish went into the water when the ice crumbled under him. He clung to one of the larger pieces and paddled to thicker ice, where he climbed to safety. He dried his clothes at No. 13 enginehouse.

Associated Press dispatches described weather conditions in other parts of the country thus:

A blizzard of the kind by which dates are fixed a generation later swept the northern Adirondacks, it was reported from Albany. A wide area was almost isolated.

The wind which accompanied the snow was evidently the same storm which took two lives at Buffalo Tuesday and early today. The wind there was so strong that it swept a man from a sidewalk into the path of a car. He was killed.

From Duluth, Minn., came the account of a father and son, trappers, who walked 30 miles in 45-degrees-below-zero weather to a lumber

Hitler Opens Olympic Games Today at Village in the Alps

Largest Entry List in History Will Mark Winter Contests; 2 American Competitors Ill; 1,061 Athletes to Compete.

By the United Press.

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, Feb. 5.—The fourth winter Olympic Games, attended by the largest entry in history, open tomorrow in these snow-covered villages at the foot of the Bavarian Alps.

At 11 a. m. (5 a. m. E. S. T.), Reichsfuehrer Hitler will officially inaugurate the snow and ice competition—the first ever held in this country and the forerunner to the larger and more significant Olympiad to be held at Berlin in August.

A total of 1,061 athletes from 28 nations will participate in 19 events, which will last until February 16.

Ringed by Icy Peaks.

The inaugural ceremonies will take place in the Ski Stadium, located slightly above Partenkirchen, one of the twin towns which are ringed in by snow-clad peaks that seem to begin almost in the townspeople's back yards.

This winter sports center, Germany's most famed, was jammed to capacity tonight with visitors and competitors from all parts of the world. Every space of lodging here and in neighboring towns was taken.

After the inaugural ceremonies, the games will get under way at 2:30 p. m., with Canada playing Poland in the opening hockey match. United States meets Germany in a second afternoon match, while in the evening Hungary plays Belgium and Sweden meets Japan.

The American hockey team is rated one of the strongest ever to represent that country and is figured to give Canada, winner of all three past Olympic contests, a stiff fight.

All-American competitors, except the speed skaters, were on the scene today and went through stiff practice sessions. Intermittent snows assured perfect conditions for skiing and bobsledding.

Two Americans Are Ill.

Only 2 Americans who were not in top condition were Figure-Skater Maribel Vinson and Skiier Richard Durrance. Miss Vinson was suffering from a slight cold, while Durrance still nursed an ankle injury.

The opening program starts when the president of the German organizing committee, Dr. Karl Ritter von Halt, receives representatives of the International Olympic committee, the organizing committee, members of the German government and diplomatic corps.

Simultaneously the teams will assemble on Stiefelfeldfussweg in alphabetical order. At the head of the parade will be Greece, mother

Lloyd-George Urges Colonies Be Re-divided

Ex-Prime Minister Asks World Conference to Deal With War Causes.

By the United Press.

London, Feb. 5.—David Lloyd-George, Britain's war-time prime minister, made a dramatic plea in Parliament tonight for a redistribution of colonial possessions of European countries—the sore spot with Germany, Italy and Japan, and a principal cause of international ill-feeling.

Speaking in support of a resolution by George Lansbury, labor leader, urging Britain to call a world conference to deal with the causes of war, Lloyd-George said dramatically:

"I do not believe there will be peace in the world until you consider the mandates (the colonial mandates granted at conclusion of the World War, when Germany's colonies were split up). Belgium, with a small population, got the best part of German East Africa and the whole of the Congo. Portugal got millions of square miles. Holland is in the same position.

"These countries have tropical territories. On the other hand you have Germany with none, Italy with practically none."

He added that Germany's claims (for return of her colonies) seemed "sufficienotly moderate to make them the basis for negotiations."

Lansbury, urging his resolution, cited the necessity of all nations for access to raw materials and markets "in order to remove from the nations the incentive to pile up armaments."

There has never been a period when armaments were of "such devilish description," he said.

The House of Commons rejected the proposal, 228 to 137, however, passing instead an amendment expressing confidence that the national government is taking all practical steps possible for the promotion of international prosperity and a better understanding among all peoples.

The principal business before this session of Parliament is to expand Britain's armed forces, on land and sea and in the air.

Lloyd-George, now a member of the House of Commons, urged the government to call a new world conference to discuss reallocation of colonial mandates administered by the League of Nations.

"I am not in favor of giving bits of the British Empire away," he said, "but under the Treaty of Versailles certain territories were given

Sailor's Life Saved By Operation at Sea

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—Stricken with appendicitis in mid-ocean, a member of the crew of the S. S. Ilsenstein was transferred in a dense fog today to the North German Lloyd ship Europa where an emergency operation was performed by the ship's surgeon.

The story of the thrilling transfer was told in a terse radiogram to the North German Lloyd offices here. It said:

Nudist Voyage 'All a Mistake,' Colony Only Seeks a 'Utopia'

By the Associated Press.

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 5.—Prospects of a nudist colony in the Virgin Islands—and the master of the good ship Fleetwood denied they existed at all—faded today and gave way to a tale of proposed wanderings in the Caribbean in search of a "Utopia."

Upon his return from a "cruise" that extended only a few miles outside of Tampa Bay in a choppy Gulf of Mexico, Maurice H. Allard, nudist organizer, said it was "all a mistake."

His colony, he said, is to be "not of nudist, but of those who are tolerant." Along with members of his family and about 15 others, he plans to set sail again in the schooner Fleetwood in search for the "best available site" for such a colony.

"They must be tolerant of many things—nudism, religion, tobacco, food and so forth," he said. "They must have mental and moral fitness, co-operativeness, be Caucasians of good physical condition having certain professional, technical or craft knowledge."

Allard and his band, with an automobile, a good supply of fuel oil and other supplies, set sail Sunday. Engine trouble held them in Tampa Bay, at a spot about 10 miles from here, overnight.

After they had rowed ashore to get parts for the engine, an auxiliary, the schooner chugged out of the bay and hoisted sails.

It came back last night.

"We made the trip down the bay early this week to test our boat," Allard said. "Engine trouble developed. Leaks developed in the hull.

"We shall leave again as soon as the boat is made seaworthy and weather conditions are favorable."

Attempts of the party to obtain a navigator brought a telegram from Cleveland, Ohio, in which the sender described himself as a "qualified ocean navigator with excellent references" and offered to join the voyage. His name was not disclosed. Seamen here had refused offers to go along.

News of the voyage, presumably to the Virgin Islands, brought a quick statement from Secretary Ickes at Washington that the law would be enforced in the islands which he controls.

The Secretary said he did not think the "old Danish law" of the colony permitted nudism.

Taxi Owner Shot in Strike At Pekin, Ill.

By the Associated Press.

Pekin, Ill., Feb. 5.—Clarence Rupp, 35, owner of the De Luxe Cab Co., was shot and seriously wounded tonight in the first outbreak of violence since the general strike began here yesterday. An unknown man fired at him from a passing car.

Some of the Rupp's cabs had been used to take food into the plant of the American Distilling Co., where loyal workers had been besieged by strike pickets.

State's Attorney Nathan Elliff said Rupp was shot as a direct outgrowth of the strike, which has resulted in a general paralysis of industry here.

Elliff said Rupp returned from a visit in Peoria tonight and was about to enter his home when an automobile drove past and one of its occupants hailed him.

Condition Critical.

As Rupp turned, he was shot in the right breast. He was taken to the Pekin Hospital, where Dr. L. F. Teter said his condition was critical.

One of the cabs operated by Rupp's company was overturned and burned by a group of men last week.

This violence was also laid to the strike authorities.

Six hundred employes of the Corn Products Refining Co. voted tonight to join the general strike which, in the last 36 hours, has reduced this once bustling city to an almost totally idle community.

The refinery workmen agreed to walk out at 10 p. m. tomorrow.

Their decision would swell the corps of striking workmen to approximately 2,100. It lent influence to the already powerful rule of the Pekin Trades and Labor Assembly.

Peace Overtures Fail.

The vote of the Corn Products employes followed an unsuccessful effort of State officials and union leaders to settle the strike at the American Distilling Co., which was one of the causes of the general walkout.

Adjournment of this conference in Peoria brought a new ultimatum from the general strike committee of the assembly.

Frank Mahoney, chairman of the committee, announced that even if the distillery strike were ended, the general strike would continue until Chief of Police Harry Donahue was removed from office.

He said Pekin workmen held the chief responsible for the order to use tear gas against pickets at the distillery plant Sunday when two pitched battles brought six arrests.

Meanwhile, Martin Drukin, director of the State Department of Labor and Gov. Henry Horner's representative in the peace negotiations, was hurrying from Peoria to the empty streets and closed business houses of Pekin.

Here it was believed he would confer with Mayor W. E. Schurman on the latest ultimatum of the laboring forces.

Only a few drug stores and filling stations remained open tonight in the face of the strike orders, and the drug stores were meeting only medical needs.

Tension Increases.

What activities continued had the sanction of the Trades and Labor Assembly, the body which called out 1,500 workmen yesterday. Milk deliveries were allowed, and restricted deliveries of fuel.

Streets were deserted. But few pickets were abroad in the biting cold and these outnumbered officers more than 10 to 1.

Tension tightened hourly after the ultimatum of the strikers—for shop owners to close or get their windows smashed—found 100 per cent compliance.

Sheriff Ralph Goar issued a request for National Guard aid—the first direct call for help the local authorities had made since the general strike flared. But there was no indication when the five companies of militiamen at Peoria, 7 miles away, would move on the city. They were mobilized there yesterday in anticipation of disorders.

Despite protests to police, no apparent attempt was made to halt the roving bands of strikers which swept through the business district to order the doors closed. Two women were arrested, but they were released after apologizing to the traders they had allegedly intimidated with threats to "blow up" their places.

Rush at Deadline.

An hour before the 3 p. m. closing deadline for stroes, the city was the center of a buying rush, reminiscent of Saturday night in prosperous times. From hundreds of homes and from the countryside around, families flocked in to lay in foodstuffs. Groceries, bakeries, meat shops, tobacconists and cold weather clothing stores were swamped. Shelves were nearly depleted in the business district before the deadline.

Then promptly at 3 o'clock, doors were locked, blinds drawn, and clerks sent home.

Signs quickly appeared on many store fronts:

"Union holiday — closed until further notice."

Meals—even a cup of coffee—became an unattainable luxury.

Delivery of coal was limited to 1 ton and to emergency cases only.

State AAA Plan Added To Stop-Gap Farm Bill By Senate Committee

Invited to Roast Duck Dinner, Official 'Debunks' Isles' Plight

Crisfield Red Cross Chairman Finds Food Supply at Smiths Island 'Scarcely Dented,' Only Two Serious Pneumonia Cases on Tangier.

By the Associated Press.

Crisfield, Md., Feb. 5.—When J. Millard Tawes, Crisfield Red Cross chairman, flew to ice-locked Smiths Island today to determine if citizens there needed food, he was greeted with an invitation to have dinner there—a roast duck dinner at that.

Tawes also flew to Tangier Island today. Private planes flew to both of them. Two transport planes landed on the ice near here, ready to transport stranded island fishermen to their homes. None of the islanders made the trip. They did not have the money.

Reports of suffering and hardship on the island were denied from every official source today. Islanders marooned here, State troopers, Red Cross officials all joined in asserting that there was "no suffering, no hardship and no unusual sickness" on the islands.

Tawes headed the list of "debunking" natives. After his flights today, he said:

"I checked every store at Ewell and Tylerton. (Two of the three tiny settlements on Smiths Island) and found their supplies scarcely dented. They needed medicine, of course, but they always do during these freezes.

"The islanders know its coming and they're prepared for it.

"Conditions, according to residents with whom I spoke at the two towns, are fully as good as, if not better than, those in any other section of the country affected by severe winter weather."

Tawes said there were eight pneumonia cases on Tangier, only two of which appeared to be in any way serious. These were under the care of two physicians.

Commenting on his invitation to the dinner consisting of roast duck, baked sweet potatoes and custard, Tawes said:

"That doesn't sound like starvation to me."

He said one woman, Miss Doris Smith, had a "light" case of chicken pox and was being cared for by competent physicians.

Health Budget Too Low Here, Ruffin Warns

Medical Head Calls Situation 'Appalling,' Urges Plea to Congress.

Citizens of the District have reason to be thoroughly alarmed over the failure of the Budget Bureau to recommend sufficient funds for the Health Department, Dr. Sterling Ruffin, president of the District Medical Society, asserted last night.

The Budget Bureau slashed $34,322 from the $542,202 estimate submitted by the District Commissioners. The Commissioners, estimate was $63,000 less than what had been termed "essential" by Health officer George C. Ruhland.

Dr. Ruffin concluded his address, which was broadcast over Station WRC, by appealing to his listeners to convey their opinions to Representative Thomas L. Blanton, head of the District sub-committee of the House Appropriations Committee, which today starts hearings on the budget.

Long Handicapped.

Control of contagious diseases is possible only through Government control, Dr. Ruffin said, and the work of the Health Department and the tuberculosis hospitals has been seriously handicapped by insufficient funds.

"The situation is getting appalling, he warned. "With Washington having next to the highest tuberculosis death rate in the whole country and with high death rates from other preventable contagious diseases, the citizens have reason to be thoroughly aroused and alarmed."

"The opinion of the Medical Society of the District of Columbia is that these appropriations simply must be increased," he added.

Through the Health Department laboratories pass testing of drinking water, milk, typhoid and diphtheria cultures, he explained. "Your life may be the next to depend upon the proper working of the laboratory apparatus. Yet, these laboratories are full of worn-out equipment past repair, and requests for replacements have been largely eliminated," he said.

Wholesale Neglect.

"It seems impossible to believe that the shortage of nurses at Gallinger Hospital has often placed 100 surgical patients under the care of two pupil nurses. Yet this is a fact. Gallinger ought to have three times as many nurses as it has, as the lowest possible number for effective care."

The proposed closing on January 1, 1937, of the Upshur Street Tuber-

House Forces Hasten Action On Greenbacks

Want Rules Committee to Act; Bar Link to Farm Group.

Disavowing any alignment with the strong farm currency expansion bloc, a group of House inflationists at a strategy conference yesterday, decided to move immediately for issuance of new currency to pay $2,237,000,000 bonus costs.

A resolution was drawn and introduced in the House calling on the Rules Committee to authorize immediate consideration of the old inflationary Patman bonus-bill, which calls for payment of the bonus in "greenbacks."

Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, who presided at yesterday's conference, said an entirely new measure is being drafted, which would be offered on the floor as a substitute for the Patman bill, when and if it is called up.

Patman said the measure was being drawn in "anticipation of an Administration tax bill," but indications were that the inflation bloc will press for its program whether or not the President calls for new taxes to pay for bonus costs.

To Seek Discharge.

Anticipating a solid wall of opposition in the Rules Committee, which is predominantly opposed to inflation legislation, the bonus expansionists plan, after a lapse of seven legislative days, to petition the House to "discharge" the Rules Committee from consideration of their resolution.

This will require signatures of 218 members, a majority of the House, and doubt was expressed by leaders that this can be done in time to assure action this session.

In announcing the decision of his so-called "steering committee," Patman blamed the "bankers" for the present movement of gold out of this country.

"An attempt is being made to carry several million dollars' worth of gold out of this country in an effort to scare us, but it won't succeed," Patman said. "It's the old shell game again. The country can afford to lose $1,000,000,000 in gold without any damage to our monetary position."

Entering the fight against inflation, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, in a statement last night warned that "an increase in the price of articles which enter into living costs is bound to follow the inauguration of currency inflation."

"In operation it will seriously affect the economic and social wel-

Drug 20 Times More Powerful Than Morphine Found, Banned

By the Associated Press.

Discovery of a narcotic so powerful that its manufacture has been prohibited was disclosed yesterday in a report of hearings before a House Appropriations sub-committee.

J. J. Anslinger, Commissioner of the Bureau of Narcotics, told the committee that at the University of Virginia, under direction of the Rockefeller Foundation and the National Research Council, "they have discovered a drug that is 20 times more powerful than morphine."

"We thought at first that it was a drug that did not have addiction properties," said Anslinger, "but we found it was so dangerous that we have not permitted its manufacture in this country at all, and we will not permit it, because it is another heroin, but about three times more dangerous."

Anslinger said the drug was tried on a group of cancer patients and found to be habit forming, but the medical effect was "much more fleeting than with heroin or morphine."

Anslinger expressed belief that "doped" race horses as well as their trainers should be barred instead of suspended from further racing.

"The difficulty with the racing commissions is this," Anslinger told the committee. "When they get a positive test on a horse they just suspend the trainer and the horse for a short time instead of barring them. I think the animal should be barred because most of these doped horses are irreparably damaged."

Repeal of 3 Acts Is Voted in House

Rigid Control by U. S. Set Up for Federal Aid Proposed.

Spirited Debate Marks Action on Potatoes, Cotton, Tobacco.

By Robert C. Albright.

In a sudden shift of front, the Senate Agriculture Committee yesterday voted to all States the right to institute their own AAA plans immediately, aided by grants from the Federal Government, but under strict supervision of Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace.

Accepting some changes written into the bill by the House Agriculture Committee, the Senate group, while continuing the temporary Federal plan for such States as care to operate under it, modified their measure to move into operation at once as an optional Federal-State co-operative program.

Unanimously the committee voted to substitute this for the original Bankhead bill reported to the Senate last week, and slated to come up for consideration in the Senate today. In so doing, some committee members expressed the view that they had overcome major constitutional objections to the original draft.

Others pointed out that Secretary Wallace suffered no loss of power under the new proposal, but on the contrary he would be given virtual authority to accept or turn down State AAA plans, with extended broad powers under the temporary Federal program.

The Senate Committee action followed swiftly on the heels of an overwhelming House vote for repeal of the Bankhead cotton-control law, the Kerr-Smith tobacco act and the Warren potato act, requested by the President. The House vote was 351 to 10.

Goes Back to Senate.

The repealer now goes back to the Senate for adjustment of minor changes from the resolution adopted Tuesday by the Senate. Approval by the House came after a stormy partisan debate, in which Republicans accused the President of executing a direct about-face on the farm issue.

Taxes to finance the revised farm program were discussed meanwhile at a White House conference attended by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Attorney General Cummings, Solicitor General Reed and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Leaving the conference, Wallace insisted the tax program is still in "the conversational stage." Issues said to be undetermined include indecision on whether or not to include a bonus amortization plan in the new tax plan. If the bonus is left out of the picture, new levies in the neighborhood of $600,000,000 a year will be asked of Congress, it was indicated.

Bonus Excluded.

Yesterday's conference was said to have been limited to a farm tax program, giving rise to widespread reports that bonus taxes have been abandoned.

Congressional leaders continued to disavow any knowledge of what the new taxes will be, but Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, said his group stands ready to hear any proposals the Administration lays before it. Speaker Byrns admitted that Congressional sentiment is against new taxation unless "absolutely necessary."

Indication that the Administration is attempting a program of retrenchment, and some check in recent spending policies, was given at the White House, where Government emergency agencies were summoned to participate in an inventory today of Federal expenditures. Today's conference was called in the wake of Tuesday's decision to cancel some unused spending authorizations. Meanwhile, a study of next year's relief needs was undertaken in an effort to curtail the original $2,000,000,000 estimate.

Lays Down 5 Policies.

Action by the Senate committee to invoke immediate operation of the State-aid plan of farm control, although not mandatory on the States, would permit them, on their own initiative, to work out their own AAA setups, conditional on five broad policies laid down in the bill.

After 1937 this plan would be-

Farley Scores Liberty League As Anti-Social

Group 'Soul of Predatory Bourbons,' He Asserts; Smith Unmentioned.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 5.—In a direct and sharply worded attack on the American Liberty League, Chairman James A. Farley of the Democratic national committee, tonight termed that group "the center and soul of the predatory powers."

Making not a single reference in his prepared text to Alfred E. Smith, who recently denounced the New Deal before a league dinner and threatened to "take a walk" out of the Democratic convention, Farley did, however, label the league an "ally" of the Republican national committee.

The Democratic committee chief, who has been vacationing in Florida, spoke before a Roosevelt dinner at the Miami Biltmore Hotel here.

He devoted a major part of his address to lashing at the league, which numbers among its members many prominent Democrats, including both Smith and John W. Davis, the 1928 and 1924 Democratic Presidential nominees. If allowed its way, he said, the league "would perpetuate the sorry business of the Mellons and the Morgans in reducing 95 per cent of the people to the status of serfs."

Farley spoke of the "widely heralded dinner" given by the league in Washington recently at which Smith was the principal speaker. There the former New York Governor declared President Roosevelt had thrown most of the 1932 Democratic platform "in the wastebasket," and lodged a charge of socialism.

Observes Platform.

Tonight, Farley asserted critics ignored the fact that the Roosevelt Administration had "carried out many of the most important planks of that platform." In addition, he asserted the league would "do much to advance socialism and communism."

"The Liberty League," said Farley, "is the organization of those bourbons who learn nothing and forget nothing. * * * It would rule America. It would squeeze the worker dry in his old age and cast him like an orange rind into the refuse pail. And it would continue the infamous policy of using the agencies of government to create a plutocracy that would perpetuate the sorry business of the Mellons and the Morgans in reducing 95 per cent of the people to the status of serfs at the mercy of the exploiters at the top.

"The American Liberty League speaks as conclusively for the reactionaries and their party as does Mr. Hoover, the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Manufacturers Association.

"Indeed, the league is composed in large part of the representatives of that big business which brought the Nation to the outer rim of ruin."

At another point, Farley termed the organization "the American Lobby League." Its members, he said, had "made so much use that they have perhaps convinced themselves that the racket of their own raising is a voice of the business community."

"I feel obliged to undeceive them," he added. "They will find when it comes to the showdown next November that for every capitalist or industrialist who wishes to bring back Hoover days there will be ten of his own economic group who appreciate that the New Deal, of which these eminent persons are so critical, stopped the panic and gave them, each of them, a chance to recover.

No Enemy of Business.

"They know it is absurd to charge the Roosevelt Administration with being the enemy of business. Its whole successful effort has been to save and restore business and it has accomplished that very thing, just as it has removed the great mass of our people from the jeopardy of economic destruction."

Farley asserted the league was composed of representatives of "very big business and the very enormous fortunes," as well as corporation lawyers "who are being well paid to belong."

Turning next to a series of recommendations to Congress made recently by the league, he declared that since the group had organized its own "supreme court," it was "not amiss for the American Liberty League to assume the functions of the President in sending a message to Congress."

"Ninety-five per cent of Americans may be astonished at the nature of its demands," he continued.

"It demands the immediate balancing of the budget, knowing full well that this would mean the abandonment of all those activities for the creation of work and the prevention of starvation to those who have no work.

"It does propose 'moderate relief appropriations'—which means the abandonment of relief in view of the number who are dependent upon it for food and shelter.

"It demands that the public works, which has given employment to 3,500,000 people, who with their dependents number to 10,000,000 people, be abandoned and the 3,500,000 be thrown back on charity.

"It naturally demands the repeal of the recent tax measure which increases the taxes of the enormously rich and increases the inheritance taxes.

"This loss is to be made up, as pointed out at the meeting of the great industrialists, by denying exemptions for children to the taxpayers and by increasing the taxes of the poor and by adding to the list of income taxpayers those who barely have enough on which to live.

"It demands the repeal of the Wagner law, which has been referred to as the magna charta of labor and which guarantees collective bargaining and protection to the toiler in his right to organize. It demands the throwing out of the Guffey act, which tends to end the cut-throat competition of the coal operators, which was driving the coal companies to bankruptcy and reducing the miners to the status of serfs."

Borah-Knox Fight May Swing Ohio to Democrats; Convention Impasse Likely.

By Franklyn Waltman

ANNOUNCEMENT by Senator William E. Borah that he planned to make an active campaign in Ohio for delegates committed to him for the Republican Presidential nomination, over night brought the political pot up to a boiling point, and the immediate results have jolted some Republican leaders.

The development which jarred the Republican leaders was the immediate decision of Col. Frank Knox also to enter the Ohio primary fight. Thus Senator Borah and Col. Knox will collide head-on, and the possibility exists that they will challenge each other in States besides Ohio. It recalls to Republican minds the specter of the Wood-Lowden impasse of 1920.

* * * *

Prior to the Borah announcement, the situation in Ohio was that the dominant Republican leaders in that State wished to remain uncommitted in the selection of a party standard bearer. Their strategy was to back a favorite son—James R. Garfield, Robert A. Taft (both sons of former Republican Presidents) and Representative Chester C. Bolton, being mentioned for that honor. The Ohio delegation would support its favorite son until it became clear to which band-wagon it should jump.

Many of these leaders are understood to be favorably inclined toward Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, believing he has the best prospect for the nomination. At all events, neither Senator Borah nor Col. Knox, apparently could discover how the favorite son set-up would benefit them—so as soon as the Idahoan jumped in, the Illinoisan gave the sign that he would follow.

This may work out to the advantage of the Republican machine in Ohio—and Gov. Landon. Assuming that the organization can hold together its following in support of a favorite son, the anti-organization Republicans would be divided between Senator Borah and Col. Knox and thus give the victory to the favorite son. In such an event Senator Borah and Col. Knox would have less prospect of eventually getting Ohio's support than if they had not entered the fight because of the feeling certain to be engendered.

But that may be an over-simplification of the Ohio situation. In the first place, the favorite son has inherent weakness because he is a straw man. Thus if it appears that either Senator Borah or Col. Knox stands a chance of getting Ohio's support, Gov. Landon is faced with the dilemma of entering that fight or running the risk of losing out completely as a sideline observer.

* * * *

Should this fight spread into other States, a situation may well develop which would create an impasse in the Republican convention. In that case the odds would favor the nomination of a dark horse. Of course, Gov. Landon, who has sought to avoid butting heads with other aspirants, might be able to keep out of it and thus be the man on whom the angry factions could agree.

It is too early to predict what will happen—but it can be said that Senator Borah's sudden declaration as an active candidate has made the Republican situation uncertain. In that he was politically smart, for he was rapidly being left behind in Republican sentiment.

* * * *

Supposing the Wood-Lowden impasse of 1920 is repeated this year, who is there today in the Republican Party sufficiently strong to knock the heads of the dissenters together and get agreement on a candidate? There is not a Republican in the country with sufficient prestige to do that. In 1920 Boies Penrose was credited with maneuvering the smoke-filled-room conference which agreed on Warren G. Harding. Of course, he had the assistance of Senate Republicans. But who in the Senate now could fill Penrose's shoes in such a mission?

* * * *

The name Boies Penrose again may be a name to conjure with in national politics. Philadelphia Republicans are seriously considering indorsing Boies Penrose 2d, nephew and namesake of the dead leader, as the Republican candidate for Congress this year against Representative J. Burrwood Daly, a Democrat.

* * * *

The turn which events have taken within the Republican Party has greatly encouraged the Democrats, some of whom recently have become pessimistic over their prospects. Ohio Democrats, for instance, envision a chance to carry that State for President Roosevelt if the Republicans should engage in a cat-and-dog fight there. They have not felt that way for several months. Indeed, a prominent Ohio Democrat privately predicted recently that Ohio would go Republican this year by a margin of 200,000 votes.

Illinois likewise seems to be headed toward the Republicans. Democratic Gov. Henry Horner has become so unpopular that he is being shelved by his own party in favor of Chicago's commissioner of health, Dr. Herman A. Bundesen. So propitious for Republican success does the outlook appear that half a dozen members of that party have sprung forward for the gubernatorial nomination, including the former holder of the office, Len Small.

* * * *

Although political oratory is reaching unprecedented heights, patriotic ardor seems to be at a low ebb. Annin & Co., New York manufacturers and distributors of flags, bunting and awnings, yesterday petitioned the Federal courts to be permitted to reorganize under recent bankruptcy laws. The company justified its request to stay in business, although it has only $425 in cash, by pointing out that this is a Presidential election year "and the demand for flags will be strong." It is an ill wind that doesn't blow good to someone.

Rallies Planned For Roosevelt's Visit in South

Meetings Are to Counteract Rebellious Activities of Gov. Talmadge.

While Postmaster General Farley and the United Mine Workers yesterday were attacking the American Liberty League, Administration political strategists extended plans for a series of great loyalty rallies when President Roosevelt visits the South and Southwest in June.

The rallies, including one at Little Rock, at which the President will dine with 5,000 persons selected from every section of Arkansas, are planned to smother the rebellious activities of Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia and his followers. A reception at Dallas, Tex., at which the President will address 40,000 persons from San Antonio, Houston and Dallas, also is contemplated.

Borah's announcement on Tuesday that he would enter the Ohio Presidential primaries, thereby actually entering the fight for the Republican nomination, brought several developments.

A leader of the Col. Frank M. Knox-for-President movement in Ohio said that Knox would make no decision on entering the Ohio contests against Borah until he made a new survey of the situation in that State, but it was reliably indicated here that Knox would enter the Ohio race in some form.

Clarence J. Brown, the Knox backer, was quoted by the Associated Press as saying in Cincinnati that he was of the "firm opinion" that the Chicago publisher would take any steps necessary to protect his interests in Ohio. Col. Knox will deliver an address today before the Cincinnati Life Underwriters Association, his fourth Ohio speech in the past several weeks.

Speaks at Vincennes.

Speaking last night at Vincennes, Ind., he charged the Administration with "bribery practiced in the name of humanity."

"Think," he said, of "handing a man a relief dole, or a relief job or a corn-hog check and then demanding that he vote for you on the penalty of having the necessities of life taken from him."

He is now on a speaking tour that will continue until April 12. Today he speaks at Cincinnati, then goes to Beaver Falls, Pa., Jersey City, N. J., Philadelphia, Manchester, N. H., his former home, and Boston.

Meanwhile, Senator Lester J. Dickinson, of Iowa, himself considered a possibility for the Republican nomination, invaded Ohio last night with a McKinley Day speech at Niles, Ohio, birthplace of the martyred President. He likened the present situation to that in 1896, when "there was the same search for political panaceas to meet problems which were basically economic in origin," according to the Associated Press.

Bryan Policies Cited.

He said that William Jennings Bryan's "magic formula" of recovery by cheapening currency did not differ materially from the present Administration's monetary and silver policies. "Both produced uncertainty over the dollar's value, which paralyzed finance and industry," he said.

"Again the issue is between experiment and experience," he continued, "but with this difference, that those who would experiment are now entrenched within the Government itself."

He announced that he would have no single campaign manager, but drives for delegates would be directed by former Representatives Carl Bachman, of West Virginia, and Royal Johnson, of South Dakota, and Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York. He said he expected to obtain some delegates from the South without any speaking tour in that section by himself being required.

There will be little soliciting of funds for his campaign, he indicated. His name is almost certain to go before the Oregon voters, he said, and he reported "some" communications had been received on his entering the Ohio race. None was critical, he remarked. He plans a week-long speaking tour in Ohio late in April, but contemplates no addresses before his Nation-wide broadcast from Washington on February 22.

Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, also considered a leading candidate for the Republican nomination, and Gov. Ben Ross, of Idaho, expected to oppose Borah for the latter's Senate seat, both refused to comment on the Senator's candidacy announcement.

There was continued friction in the Democratic camp, also.

Former Gov. Joseph B. Ely, of Massachusetts, went on the air to defend Alfred E. Smith and denounce the "brain trusters" of the Administration. Speaking on "The Case of Robinson Against Smith," he declared that "brain trusters" sought to "destroy Smith's influence with the American people and besmirch his reputation to achieve their own wild purposes."

He referred to the reply of Senate Majority Leader Robinson to Smith's attack on the Administration at the Liberty League dinner here two weeks ago, and declared of Smith, "he is busier today in his charitable undertakings than Senator Robinson in the passing of unconstitutional legislation."

Liberty League Held 'Inimical' At Mine Parley

Workers Again Are Urged to Back New Deal as Aid to Labor.

By the Associated Press.

The United Mine Workers' convention yesterday bitterly criticized the American Liberty League and Al Smith, Jouett Shouse and many wealthy notables, as "selfish," "un-American" and "inimical to the interests of the people."

The attack was made in a resolution passed with a whoop after miners had been urged again to unite behind the New Deal for a continuation of the battle against "special interests." The convention already has pledged its support to President Roosevelt's campaign for re-election.

The resolution described the league as representing "millionaires and multi-millionaires who have piled up huge fortunes while denying their employes the right to organize" and charged its members with "ganging up against any social legislation, no matter how mild."

It was adopted after Senator Matthew M. Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, told the miners that by actively supporting President Roosevelt at the ballot boxes next November they would be uniting with "all other liberty-loving people" in the fight against "special interests."

Neely assailed wealthy classes for "pleading for a balanced budget for their fat pocketbooks" while "the American people are pleading for a balanced ration for their starving families."

The union convention previously had adopted a resolution urging its members to support the New Deal campaign in their districts and authorizing contribution from its $2,000,000 "war chest" to President Roosevelt's re-election campaign fund.

Meanwhile, President John L. Lewis reaffirmed his determination to withdraw the powerful mine union from the American Federation of Labor if necessary to carry on his fight for industrial unions as opposed to the traditional American Federation of Labor craft unions.

His warning yesterday came after the International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers reported continued efforts of craft unionists to "spread out" their industrial union. Lewis repeated a previous threat that if the oil workers' union was thrown out of the A. F. of L. his mine union, the federation's strongest single unit, would follow voluntarily.

The miners were told yesterday by J. Warren Madden, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, that problems of their industry must be solved from a "national" basis, if at all. He predicted the Supreme Court would uphold the New Deal's attempt at national regulation through the Guffey act.

Another speaker, Percy Tetlow, Bituminous Coal Commission member, warned that if the Supreme Court should invalidate the Guffey act, the miners would face a "crisis." Scrapping of the act would be followed, he predicted, by "sweeping wage reductions" and efforts of "great, powerful coal companies to crush out every weak unit in the industry."

Mother Hunted In Sterilization May Be Abroad

Police Believe Mrs. Hewitt Sailed for England; Two Doctors Surrender.

By the United Press.

San Francisco, Feb. 5.—Police tonight expressed conviction that Mrs. Maryon Cooper Hewitt, socialite, sought on mayhem charges in the sterilization of her daughter, Ann Cooper Hewitt, had left the United States for England.

Police said their belief was based on word from New York authorities, who had been asked to arrest Mrs. Hewitt. A telegram said:

Two Doctors Surrender.

Two San Francisco doctors, Tilton Tillman and Samuel G. Boyd, surrendered today and posted $250 bail on mayhem charges in the same case.

In addition to the criminal proceedings, which carry possibility of a 1-to-14-year prison sentence on conviction, Mrs. Hewitt, the doctors and a San Francisco psychiatrist, Mrs. Mary Scally, faced a $500,000 damage suit brought by Ann.

The pale, undersized little heiress to the fortune of Peter Cooper Hewitt, New York social scion and famed inventor, charged that she was sterilized by Dr. Boyd after her mother had ordered the operation and Dr. Tillman approved it. Mrs. Scally purportedly gave her psychology tests which established her mental age as that of an 11-year-old child, and caused the doctors to term her "feeble-minded." She was not named in the mayhem complaint signed yesterday by Police Inspector George Engler.

Court Hearing Scheduled.

Dr. Tillman, long a friend of the Hewitt family, is a member of the San Francisco Lunacy Commission. Dr. Boyd is a noted surgeon. Both are scheduled to appear in Municipal Judge Sylvain Lazarus' court tomorrow in connection with the charges.

Issues involved included Ann's charges that her mother, after years of cold and unaffectionate treatment, had her sterilized in a plot to gain control of her fortune, estimated at $2,000,000, and the mother's answering charge that she acted to save Ann from possible moral pitfalls, and in view of Ann's "backward" tendencies.

Ship to be Checked.

New York, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—The North German Lloyd liner Bremen sailed from New York on January 25, officials said tonight, but added they had no way of checking until tomorrow on whether a "Baroness d'Erlanger" was aboard.

Englewood, N. J., Feb. 5 (U.P.).—William Breslin, attorney who has been representing Mrs. Maryon Cooper Hewitt in New York and Jersey courts, said tonight he was with her today in New York City when informed of a report that San Francisco authorities said their advices indicated she had sailed January 25 on the Bremen for Europe.

Breslin would not reveal Mrs. Hewitt's whereabouts, but reiterated his statement of last night that she was recovering from an illness and expected to return to California to face mayhem charges.

Eden, Not King Edward Called Men's Style-Setter

St. Louis, Feb. 5 (A.P.).—Merchants were advised today to regard Capt. Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, as the men's fashion pace setter.

J. H. Denny, St. Louis department store executive, told the American Retailers Association convention that Capt. Eden would surpass the former Prince of Wales as a style influence.

camp. They were forced to leave their cabin because of food shortage.

At Bethany, Mo., it was 25 degrees below zero. Storekeepers found that the difference in temperature between the outdoors and the interior of their shops caused long cracks to appear in the plate-glass show windows.

Michigan Sections Isolated.

Winter's most severe blow to Michigan sent the mercury as low as 33 degrees below zero and isolated entire communities with towering snowdrifts. Several trains were stalled. Two deaths brought the toll of the current cold wave to ten. Shortages of fuel and food were faced in several communities, cut off by 10-foot drifts. Twice snow-plow crews were called to break the way for physicians to expectant mothers' bedsides. The doctor beat the stork in each case.

Dwindling food supplies and falling temperatures added to the troubles of the storm-swept South. There were floods along the Gulf Coast, with some larger rivers still rising.

2 Ships Feared Lost in Gale On Japan Coast

79 in Crews of Vessels; Worst Storm Rages Since 1890.

San Francisco, Feb. 5 (U.P.).—Two vessels with 79 men aboard were feared lost tonight in storm-swept seas off the coast of Japan.

Distress signals were heard from the freighter Eglantine, of Houston, Tex., and the Japanese freighter Unnan Maru, both en route to Yokohama, late last night.

No trace of the ships had been found today.

Forty-five men were reported aboard the Unnan Maru and 34 aboard the Eglantine.

Globe Wireless, which heard radio messages from the two Dollar ships, said no other vessels were believed near enough to proceed to where the stricken freighters vanished.

Seas were abating and the worst of the storm, which struck the area last night, apparently had passed, messages from the President Hoover and President Garfield indicated.

The worst blizzard in years was sweeping parts of Japan in the wake of the storm at sea.

The Eglantine, a 3,927-ton vessel, was said to be carrying a cargo of cotton bound for Yokohama and other Far Eastern ports.

Tokyo (Thursday), Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Hope was abandoned today for the freighter Unnan Maru and her crew of 45, caught last night in the worst blizzard since 1890.

Rescue craft returned this morning after an all-night search off Shionomisaki, whence the distressed ship sent frantic S O S signals yesterday. A few minutes later, her radio went dead. The rescue ships found no trace of the vessel and feared all aboard had drowned.

'Enemy' Aircraft Destroy Boston

Concord, N. H., Feb. 5 (A.P.).—A swift fleet of Army bombing and attack planes theoretically destroyed Boston today, even as the chief of the United States Army Air Corps described the Nation's air defense as inadequate.

Nine bombers based here and seven attack planes stationed at Mitchell Field, N. Y., circled Boston twice before 16 pursuit planes appeared to ward them off.

After engaging in war maneuvers for a half hour, all returned to Concord and the defenders winged on to Mitchell Field, to prepare a "bombardment" and defense of New York City tomorrow.

Maj. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, air force commander, speaking at a luncheon of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company in Boston's historic Faneuil Hall, asserted the present Air Corps was "short of equipment, personnel and bases."

ing planto and the Quaker Oats Co. About a hundred pickets late in the day gathered about the yeast works and persuaded a few employes to turn back. The rest were allowed to enter on their plea they needed their pay checks. Once in, the workers stayed there.

Donahue declared he was not intimidated by the demand for his resignation and declared:

"What this town needs is a vigilante committee of about 100 tough citizens."

His defiance was echoed by C. J. Ries, assistant manager of Fleischmann's, who said:

"The union men can't walk out of this plant without the notice that their contract calls for. We are going to run this plant just as long as possible. If we can get help to drive away the pickets, or do it ourselves, we're going to do it."

An official of Corn Products Refining, who asked that his name not be used, said his plant was willing to close down until the end of the trouble, but that he hoped to operate until Saturday.

Donahue charged that "slot machine interest," opposed to a strict ban on their equipment, had engendered the protest against him and his force.

Despite the severe weather and non-delivery of foodstuffs during the day, no suffering was reported to municipal authorities. The last-minute rush of housewives was believed to have provisioned most families against immediate needs. But persistence of the business paralysis would bring much misery, officials said.

Hoffman Faces Revolt in Party On Kidnap Case

State G. O. P. Takes Control; Hauptmann Not to Get Further Reprieve.

By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 5—Gov. Harold G. Hoffman tonight faced a revolt in his own party because of his re-opening of the Hauptmann case, when the Republican State committee announced it was assuming active leadership of the State organization.

A program was announced virtually stripping the Governor of power to remove Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the State police, by assuring passage of a bill which will keep Schwarzkopf in office until the Legislature approves his successor.

Simultaneously, Hoffman announced that his investigation into the kidnaping case would not delay execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, condemned slayer, who is to die around the week of March 15. Hauptmann will be resentenced after his 30-day reprieve expires February 15.

Chairman Henry W. Jeffers announced the Republican committee demands the following:

1. Assisting in settlement of all diputed questions of appointments.
2. Establishment of permanent headquarters.
3. Full charge of raising party funds.
4. Handling of all party appointments.
5. Control of the Legislature, where the party has a majority.

These measures virtually will take away the power Hoffman previously wielded as Governor. It was indicated Hoffman immediately would begin a campaign to regain control, at least before the national convention, although he said he had no objection to the platform.

Asserting there would be no more reprieves for Hauptmann, the Governor said he had a letter in which Dr. John F. (Jafsie) Condon insisted he could identify "one or two of the kidnapers" before Hauptmann's Flemington trial.

Hoffman had contended in granting Hauptmann his first reprieve that more than one person was involved in the kidnap-murder of the Lindbergh baby and that a "complete investigation" should be made before Hauptmann is executed.

Police Report Backs Schotter In Street Row

Force Used by Patrolman in Arresting C. U. Men Held Reasonable.

Only reasonable force was used by Patrolman William A. Schotter in arresting two Catholic University football players and two alumni of the school early Tuesday, after a melee in which Jack Y. Regan was seriously injured.

This will be the substance of a report to be submitted today to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, by detectives who were assigned to investigate the affray by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Regan, who was captain of the Catholic University football team in 1925, remains in a serious condition in Emergency Hospital.

"He has improved considerably today," his physician, Dr. John Shugrue, said last night. "There is a lateral fracture at the base of skull; but, barring complications, he has a fair chance for recovery."

Chief of Detectives Bernard W. Thompson expects that the investigation will be completed today.

George Mulligan, star end of the 1935 team; Capt. Edwin Karpowich, who led the Cardinals to victory in the Orange Bowl game, and Edward Lynch, a former C. U. athlete, all face charges of assault on Patrolman Schotter.

The affray took place at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest after the Cardinals' celebration of the Orange Bowl victory had ended.

Business Gains Continuing, Say 2 U. S. Sources

Morgenthau Calls Banking Situation Good; Trade Held 10 Pct. Better.

From two Government sources yesterday came reports that business is continuing on the upgrade.

Secretary Morgenthau was revealed to have told a House Appropriations sub-committee that business is improving in almost all lines and that "the banking situation is excellent."

Ernest G. Draper, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, said that business generally in January was 10 per cent above January of last year.

Morgenthau pointed out to the House committee that while the public debt is up to $30,800,000,000, interest rates have been cut to the point where they result in an annual saving of $290,000,000.

Refunding Troubles Over.

The Morgenthau statements were contained in a transcript of hearings on the Treasury-Postoffice appropriation made public yesterday.

In answer to a question by Representative Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, Morgenthau said:

"I would say that the reports we get on general business conditions show that there is improvement in almost all lines of business all over the United States. The banking situation is excellent."

The Treasury Secretary added that the Government's refunding troubles "are all behind us," with no big maturities before 1939.

Hull Confers With Lindsay.

Discussing silver purchases, Morgenthau said he believed the Government's activity had stimulated production of the metal. He said purchases which started at the rate of 24,000,000 ounces a year may reach 45,000,000 ounces this year.

In making his estimate that January business was generally up 10 per cent, Draper added that there were some exceptions. He called attention to figures in the Commerce Department's monthly survey which showed that December business had reached a peak for the recovery period.

Meanwhile, Secretary Hull revealed that he has been discussing world trade conditions and the best means toward international economic recovery with Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador. One of the conferences was held yesterday.

Hull said the conferences were confined to a general exchange of views and that no concrete proposals had been made by either government.

Franc Weaker, 2-Day Exodus Of Gold Halted

No Applications Are Made for Licenses to Ship Bullion From U. S.

By the Associated Press.

With the franc hovering generally below the point of profitable export, a halt came yesterday in the two-day exodus of the metal from American shores.

The Treasury stood by throughout the day to grant a license to any who desired to ship bullion cheaper than exchange, but no applications were received.

Marking the first reversal of the inward flow since September, 1934, the last two days had seen $15,668,000 bullion exported. Most of the shipments were consigned to France.

One Treasury official contended this country "had gained a whole shiploads of gold while losing only a rowboat full since revaluation; that while 15 tons has been exported in the last two days, there still remained an abundant supply of 10,176 tons."

To some Treasury officials, the gold outflow was viewed as partly relieving a domestic situation. They said the huge accumulation of the metal since revaluation early in 1934 has been the main contributory factor in building up member bank reserve balances to more than $3,000,000,000 in excess of legal requirements. This sum, representing ten times that amount in credit potentialities, might lend itself to an unhealthy boom should credit conditions get out of hand, some fiscal experts contend.

On February 3 this Government's stock amounted to $10,176,000,000 of the estimated $23,500,000,000 world gold supply.

Dillinger's Girl Friend Paroled to Indian Kin

Keshena, Wis., Feb. 5 (AP).—Evelyn Frechette, girl friend of John Dillinger before he died a gangster's death, was back on the bleak Menominee Reservation here today, shielded from the prying eyes of her people, the Indians.

In the tiny white house of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Warrington, her relatives, the 27-year-old Evelyn settled down to four months of seclusion. She was placed on probation to the Warringtons by Michigan prison officials after her parole from the State institution at Milan, where she was sentenced for harboring Dillinger.

U. S. Chorus Girls vs. British Debated by House Committee

High Kickers, Gigolos and Fat Opera Stars Also Occupy Session of Immigration Committee; Passersby Wonder What It's All About.

By the United Press.

Things artistic—like high kickers, gigolos and fat opera stars—so occupied the House Immigration Committee yesterday that passersby stopped outside and wondered what the fight was about.

Well, sir, here's the question that almost led to blows: Do British chorus girls have anything that their American sisters haven't?"

The Hon. Everett McKinley Dirksen, lover of the drama and Republican Congressman from Pekin, Ill., said they didn't, insofar as he had noticed—and he had noticed carefully. The Hon. Emanuel Celler, who also loves the drama and who comes from Brooklyn, N. Y., which is closer to England than Pekin, Ill., said they did—although he didn't specify.

Chairman Samuel Dickstein shushed this argument as best he could and tried to get his fellow statesmen to confine their remarks to the broad, general subject under consideration, to wit: Shall the United States Government restrict entry of foreign artists into this country?

The committeemen argue this question every year. They never decide it, but they always have a grand battle. Yesterday's session was no exception.

The committee had two bills before it—one to send foreign gigolos kiting home if they married American heiresses, and the other to bar alien actors and musicians unless they had distinguished merit. That's where the chorus girl business came up.

Celler said the bill would ruin American theatrical producers. You can't expect an American actor, he said, to become a frozen-faced English butler, nor an American actress a French maid. Furthermore, he said he believed the necessity of deciding which thespians have distinguished merit would place a heavy burden on American consuls abroad. These gentlemen, he said, already are overworked.

"I never noticed that," said Dirksen. "I have been abroad, too. And I never ran across any consuls who didn't have time to take time out and take a couple of cups of cognac with me."

Celler started to report, when Dirksen added:

"And, anyway, I didn't see any British chorus girls that had anything American girls don't."

"So ho?" demanded Celler. "What do you know about it?"

"I, myself," responded the Congressman from Pekin, "have had a little theatrical experience."

Representative Charles Kramer, who hails from Los Angeles and who is something of a movie fan, chimed in to say that if Congress passed any such bill I would have to let in Greta Garbo and George Arliss, or else. He would insist on this, he said. Otherwise he approved the idea, including its effect on portly opera stars.

It would make a fine law, he said. "Now," he asked Celler, "do you think Mme. Stavisky possesses distinguished merit and ability?"

She is the widow of the French swindler, now singing in a New York night club. Celler thought that one over and was about to answer when Dickstein and the bell summoning Congressmen to the chamber ended the argument.

Dickstein said: "She must have something!"

The bell said: "Ga-r-r-r-r-ing!"

Take your choice. There'll be no more news on this subject until the committee opens the 1937 Congressional arts and drama season next February.

Index Finger Is Found In Cast-Off Glove

Springfield, Mo., Feb. 5 (AP).—The "mystery of the extra finger" puzzled police tonight.

Two days ago a brown canvass glove was found near the home of F. C. Hartung. Last night he put on the glove and found half an index finger inside. Authorities said there was nothing to indicate who "lost" it. They hoped to find a clew in fingerprint files.

Kansas City to Make Traffic Safety Films

Kansas City, Feb. 5 (AP).—Kansas City is going into the movie business—in the cause of safety on the streets.

Plans for a motion picture to "educate pedestrians" were announced today by Police Director Otto P. Higgins and City Manager H. F. McElroy. It will be produced by the police department.

"Stars" in the production will be Mayor Bryce B. Smith and City Manager McElroy. They'll play the role of automobile victims.

fare of the masses of the people," Green said. "In fact, the primary purpose of inflation is to elevate price levels and to increase commodity prices."

He declared the executive council of the A. F. of L. is appreciative of the fact that proposed currency inflation "is a matter of moment and grave importance to labor."

"Obviously," he said, "labor will be at a decided disadvantage if commodity prices increase and wages remain stationary at the depressed level to which they have been forced through the pursuit of a wage-deflation policy."

He said as a matter of "sound policy" an increase in wages should precede an increase in commodity prices. He said his executive council is insisting immediately upon wage increases as a necessary "safeguard."

Representative William P. Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, a leader of the House labor bloc, has been an active member of Patman's bonus inflation group.

In determining to embark on his bonus inflation drive, without a direct alliance with the House farm and currency expansion faction, Patman said they were pursuing "separate" courses, but in a large measure members of the two groups already are identical.

The farm inflation bloc pivots around the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing measure, which would introduce $3,000,000,000 in "greenbacks" into circulation. Repeatedly, members of the group have forced signatures on their petition for a vote on their bill up to the striking point, only to see names withdrawn at the instance of House leaders.

A few days ago, the petition had 215 signatures, only 3 shy of the number needed, but yesterday the number of signers had fallen to 213.

House Whip Pat Boland, active in fighting the movement, insists the measure will not pass the House, even if it is forced to a vote.

State AAA's Approved

come mandatory if the States continued to receive any grants from the Federal Government. In the meantime, the temporary stopgap, administered by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and his Department of Agriculture, with broad discretionary powers, would be operative in all States not choosing to embark on the co-operative program at once.

The committee voted unanimously for the shift. Chairman Ellison D. Smith, who had criticized what he considered "doubtful" constitutional features of the original measure, said the redraft "tremendously improved" its chances in the courts, but declined to say whether he would vote for it.

He had recently referred to the State-aid program as "right down his alley."

Explains Changes.

Smith explained the committee's changes as follows:

"This bill provides for State co-operation with the Federal Government. The Department of Agriculture will act as co-ordinator for the States. The bill does not say that two years must intervene before the States signify their intention of co-operating. A State may enter the permanent farm program whenever it sees fit. * * *

"If we are to have Federal aid for agriculture, it will have to be done by the States. In this rewritten bill, the Federal Government will assist, and the States will have the right to reject the aid."

Minor changes were written into the House text of the revised plan, but the broad policy objectives remain largely intact.

They are:

1. Preservation and improvement of soil fertility.
2. Promotion of the economic use and conservation of land.
3. Diminution of exploitation, and wasteful and unscientific use of national soil resources.
4. Re-establishment and maintenance of farmers' purchasing power at prices for agricultural commodities fair to both producers and consumers.
5. In carrying out purposes of the act, due regard would be given to the maintenance of a continuous and stable supply of agricultural commodities adequate to meet consumer demand.

Any State which adopts a plan to carry out one or more of these purposes, in a form prescribed by the Secretary, would be entitled to Federal grants immediately the plan is instituted.

Before it can be approved, however, a State plan must fulfill the following conditions, giving broad jurisdictional powers to the Secretary of Agriculture:

Authorize an agency, subject to the Secretary's approval, to administer the program.

Provide for participation by such county and community committees or associations of farmers as the Secretary "finds necessary."

Require submission to the Secretary of reports showing the plan is being administered in compliance with his requirements.

The Secretary would take into consideration the acreage and value of major soil depleting and major export crops, in apportioning the grants among the States on or before each November 4.

The Secretary's powers are even broader under the temporary program which would be mandatory for the next two years unless the States come in with their own plans. Under this two-year "emergency" plan, the Secretary would measure payments to farmers by:

1. The acreage of crop land.
2. The acreage of soil improving or erosion preventing crops.
3. Changes in farming practices during the year on the "subsidized" land.
4. Percentage of normal production of designated commodities, which equals percentage of normal national production required for domestic consumption.
5. The Secretary shall take into consideration "productivity" of land affected, and may utilize the agriculture extension service, and county and community farm committees.

Senator John H. Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, whose original farm bill was scheduled to come up in the Senate today, was ill last night, and it was said he may not be present when the Agriculture Committee proposes its substitute for his measure.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace was in a merry mood at his press conference yesterday, aiming several shafts at the bill by Representative Clifford R. Hope (Republican), Kansas, to pay producers of wheat, cotton, hogs and tobacco the equivalent for the tariff protection they are unable to receive under the present rate structure.

"I hope the Republicans will become enthusiastic about the Hope bill," Wallace punned. "Then when they are well out on a limb, we'll saw it off. I have a high regard for Hope, higher than for the Republicans behind the bill, but, while the time is not yet ripe, when they're all out on the limb, we'll get out our saw."

Wallace said unless Congress acts soon, the Administration will have a "very tight squeeze" in getting its new cotton-control program under way, as "planting time" will be here in the next two weeks.

Noisy House debate yesterday on repeal of the cotton, tobacco and potato control programs was in strange contrast to the Senate's 30-second approval of the repealer the previous day.

In vain Representative Vito Marcantonio, New York Progressive Republican, appealed to members to vote down repeal as a rebuke to the Supreme Court for invalidating AAA. In the end only nine members voted against repeal of the laws. They were Representatives Amlie, Gehrmann and Withrow, all Wisconsin Progressives; Lundeen, Farmer-Laborite, of Minnesota; Monaghan, of Montana; Moritz, of Pennsylvania; O'Connor, of New York, and Kerr, of North Carolina, all Democrats.

On a roll call vote, 351 ballots were piled up for the repealer, despite Marcantonio's loudly reiterated invitation:

"This is a splendid opportunity for you to take the stand that Congress has the right to pass the laws and that the Supreme Court has no power to declare them unconstitutional."

O'Connor said he voted against repeal of the three acts because he thought "the G. O. P. has got the Democratic Party in a spot on this action." He said in seven terms in Congress he had never voted to repeal any law, "not even the Volstead act."

Eastman Lays Rail Troubles To Road Chiefs

Says Executives' Failure to Act Delays Plan for Coordination.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 5.—In a bluntly worded address, Joseph B. Eastman last night charged railroad executives with responsibility for delaying the Government's policies for co-ordination of railroad transportation.

Speaking before the Pittsburgh Traffic and Transportation Association, the Federal transportation co-ordinator said:

"The prime reason for the slow progress to date of the co-ordination policy, as I see the situation, has been either the inability of the railroad executives to agree among themselves, or a general disinclination on their part to act.

"At bottom, the trouble is that the management thinks narrowly in terms of their own particular road, rather than in broader terms."

"For the Common Good."

Eastman said that while it was natural and proper for executives to put the welfare of their own roads first, they did not appreciate the extent to which individual welfare would be promoted "by action which is for joint benefit, for the common good."

He condemned "too much rugged individualism" among railroads and said co-ordination policies only opposed that this and "abuses and wastes of competition" be eliminated.

Recalling his recent announcement he soon would compel terminal unification in 11 cities through powers granted him under the emergency transportation act, Eastman said that if necessary this step would be followed by a "series of orders, working up gradually from the smaller projects to those which are large."

He said that these steps can be taken only "so far as the time limit of the act permits."

Under the act, Eastman's office would expire June 16. He has recommended that Congress extend it for at least five years.

Pekin Can Buy Milk; Cigarettes Are Taboo?

Pekin, Ill., Feb. 5 (AP).—Medicine, milk and rations of coal were among the few conveniences of urban life allowed citizens of this strike-bound city tonight.

Electric lights still burned on the empty streets, and there was gas for kitchen fires, but a package of cigarettes had become a luxury.

"Closed," "closed," "closed," read the signs in restaurants, food stores, haberdasheries and all other business houses, owners of which bowed—when the clock struck 3 this afternoon—to labor's edict that commerce must be suspended until the American Distilling Co. strike was settled.

Residents could still make a telephone call—if they could get the attention of harried operators—but telegrams were taboo.

In a double-edged attack on the suit filed last month by 135 of the Nation's principal railroads to restrain the enforcement of the railroad retirement act, the Government yesterday struck back, in District Supreme Court, against the charge the act was unconstitutional.

Reply by Helvering.

The Railroad Retirement Board asked dismissal of the suit and Commissioner of Internal Revenue Guy T. Helvering, one of the defendants, filed in addition a formal reply in which he denied there were any unconstitutional provisions in the act which places on him the burden of enforcing the taxes imposed by it.

The Government charged, among other things, the suit was prematurely brought because the board has issued no orders nor taken any action as yet which would affect the rights of the carriers. The act, it was explained, does not become effective until March 1. It was also shown the board has no power as yet to begin operations.

Arguments on the motion to dismiss will be heard next week.

Senators Ask Morgan Advice On War Debts

Lamont Deprecates Plan to Issue New Bonds; Suggests Parley.

By Felix Bruner.

The Senate Munitions Committee yesterday turned to the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. for expert advice of the possibility of collecting defaulted war debts, but received little encouragement.

Interrupting the monotonous discussion of financial operations in the early part of the war, Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, asked Thomas W. Lamont, Morgan partner, what would happen if the United States should exercise its option under war debt agreements to ask the defaulting governments to issue marketable bonds to cover the debts. Vandenberg had previously made this proposal as a possible way of collecting at least part of the indebtedness.

"As long as the countries are in default American investors would not buy the bonds," Lamont said.

Vandenberg suggested that the bonds be indistinguishable from other obligations of debtor nations and that in this way they would find acceptance in world markets. Lamont replied that the obligations would have to be distinguishable because they would be virtually the only such bonds in the world markets.

"No Agreement."

"Is there any field of this kind that could be explored by the Government?" Vandenberg asked. "Do you think there is any way this option could be exercised under the debt agreement?"

"When the debts went into default, didn't the agreement fall?" asked Lamont. "If so, there is no agreement."

Lamont said that he believed the only solution of the debt problem lies in the opening of negotiations and the reaching of fresh agreements.

"Would it be possible to write an agreement in terms that would defy default?" Vandenberg asked.

"I don't think so," Lamont replied. "But if we would rather have half a loaf than no bread at all we might enter into an agreement susceptible of fulfillment."

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, indicated that issuance of bonds against the debts and their purchase by the public would have the effect of transferring the debts from public obligations to private ones. He suggested this would be a new procedure. The committee has been attempting to show that at the beginning of the war, money was loaned to the allies and used to pay private debts of the same countries in the United States.

Lamont pointed out that the British debt is about $4,000,000,000, the French debt about $2,500,000,000 and the Italian debt about $1,500,000,000.

"I don't believe the American market could absorb any such amounts," he said.

"Morgan Could Sell Them."

"Why does the American market have to absorb all of it?" Vandenberg persisted. "If J. P. Morgan & Co. had this contract I'll bet 50 cents to a plugged nickel they would make it stick."

Lamont smilingly suggested:

"Senator, we should have to persuade you to come into the firm to carry out the contract."

Russell Leffingwell, a Morgan partner and an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury during the war, said the suggestion of Vandenberg was an example of the economic nationalism to which he objected. He had been pleading for concerted world action to serve international problems and had frequently described himself as a "free trade man."

"We can't solve our problems on the theory that other countries are the 11 stubborn jurors," he said.

"Then," said Senator Clark, "we would sit with our hands folded and see other countries spend money they owe us in preparation for war."

Lamont objected that he did not believe this country should sit with folded hands but that the Government should sit down with other governments and arrange new plans for peace.

Clark suggested that if armaments should be scaled down on a pro-rata basis no one would suffer except the munition makers.

Rathbone Queried.

The committee held a night session last night to conclude the hearing of the Morgan partners and other bankers. On the stand during the night meeting, besides Leffingwell and Lamont, was Albert Rathbone, New York attorney and banker, who also was an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury during the war.

J. P. Morgan, who had returned to the hearing unbidden because, he said, he "didn't want to miss the party," left at noon for New York. George Whitney, another Morgan partner, left before the night meeting.

Most of the day was taken up with a discussion of allied pressure which persuaded the United States to begin paying off French and British war debts incurred before America entered the war.

The hearing will be resumed today with testimony of Interstate Commerce Commission engineers on the cost of the Government taking over munition plants and shipyards.

Friday the committee will hear representatives of Bethlehem, Carnegie and Midvale steel companies tell of their war-time activities.

Stretz Killed Doctor, Her Attorney Admits

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—Vera Stretz today heard her attorney admit officially for the first time that she had shot and killed Dr. Fritz Gebhardt, German industrialist, in his apartment here last November 11.

Samuel Leibowitz, the lawyer, brought her into court to demand a speedy trial on the first-degree murder indictment under which she has been held without bail.

Justice Aaron J. Levy ordered that the State place her on trial within 30 days or he will admit a motion to fix bail for her release.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 5 (AP).—With a uniformed policeman as his chauffeur, George Bernard Shaw went sightseeing here today. In an automobile provided by the police department, the writer and his wife, who arrived yesterday on the cruise ship Arandora Star, rode from one end to the other of the city.

From the rarely quoted wife of the Irish critic and playwright, however, came the only comment, offered as the couple made ready to reboard ship for luncheon and Shaw's usual afternoon nap.

"I think it all most interesting."

Housing Group Urges Cheaper Building Loans

Low-Cost Program Asked After Prolonged Study for Roosevelt.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Advisors studying the housing problem for President Roosevelt decided yesterday to recommend a Nationswide low-cost program based on cheap Federal loans to local communities.

Their decision, climaxing months of study, will be presented soon to the White House in the expectation that enabling legislation would be sought at this session of Congress.

If finally approved, the program will mark the formulation of the first definite New Deal policy toward providing homes for persons in low income groups, as well as further stimulating business recovery.

House Program Arranged.

As described by authoritative sources, the new undertaking would contemplate:

1. A long-range building program.

2. Interest rates perhaps as low as 1 per cent on Federal loans.

3. Construction of facilities for as many as 1,000,000 families.

The new program was disclosed only a day after President Roosevelt had taken inventory and announced that as much as $1,000,000,000 in authorized funds for the Home Owners Loan Corporation could be erased.

The move to cancel this authorization was viewed in some housing quarters as the first concrete indication that the Administration plans to limit its direct lending activities in the mortgage field and shift more of the responsibility to local communities.

Proceedings Arranged.

Under the new program, interest rates on money advanced by the Government would be so low as to constitute a subsidy encouraging housing projects by local communities.

Full control of management and condemnation proceedings would be lodged with local officials under the plan, the aim being to centralize activities from Washington. The President's experts were described as feeling the local communities are better able to judge their own problems.

The plan was evolved in conferences of heads of various New Deal agencies concerned with housing, such as the Federal Housing Administration, Home Owners Loan Corporation, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Public Works Administration and the Electric Farm and Home Authority.

Judge to Rule if Apartment Aid Interfered With Divorce Papers

Action Against Capt. Nixon and Wife Was Upset By Employe, Lawyer for Former Spouse Contends.

Did a night clerk in the Stoneleigh Court Apartments, on Connecticut avenue, interfere with a process server who wanted to see Capt. Thomas Hay Nixon, U. S. A., and his socialite wife, the former Anna Cooke, about a divorce action brought by the captain's second wife?

And if so, is R. J. Conway, the clerk, in contempt of the District Supreme Court?

The questions are expected to be answered by Justice Joseph W. Cox today.

Hearings in the case began in Justice Cox's court yesterday, Harold T. Scott, a former court attache and now a private detective, testifying that not only did Conway, on many occasions, inform him that the Nixons, residents of the apartment, were out, but on one occasion when he declined to believe him, called the police and asked them to take the process server away.

Scott said he was hiding in an apartment corridor waiting for the Nixons and that the police, when assured he had been appointed by the court to serve the papers, declined to function as bouncers.

One day, Scott testified, the Nixons pulled up in front of the apartment in a car and Conway dashed out, presumably to warn them that the detective was still hanging around. Scott said he got out to the machine in time to throw the papers into Mrs. Nixon's lap.

Attorneys for the Nixons claimed Scott's action did not constitute service, particularly inasmuch as the papers blew out the car window as the Nixons drove away.

The alleged service on the Nixons was in connection with an action brought by Mrs. Annette Pauline Nixon, the captain's mate No. 2, who charges that the divorce her husband obtained in Pennsylvania was not legal and that, therefore, he could not have married lawfully the present Mrs. Nixon.

11,000 Worker In N. Y. Hotels ThreatenStrike

More Trouble Is Seen on Labor Fronts; Seven-Day Week Charged.

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—Labor trouble threatened from a new quarter tonight after a day of rapid-fire developments that brought peace on three fronts and a seemingly hopeless deadlock on a fourth.

Hotel workers, claiming a union membership of 11,000 in 219 hostelries, presented a series of demands for shorter hours and higher wages and announced they would walk out unless operators come to terms.

Chris Houlihan, local union president, said he had been authorized, as a result of unsatisfactory negotiations with the hotel men's association, to call a strike at a moment's notice.

He declared some hotels had been requiring their employes to work seven days a week for low wages since the invalidation of the NRA. The union demands a 48-hour week and a minimum wage scale of $16 for bellboys, $24 for elevator operators and $18 for chambermaids.

Meanwhile, the difficulties between 105,000 union dressmakers and their employers grew more acute.

The situation promised to reach a crisis Friday afternoon, after three months of wrangling, when a strike vote will be taken in Madison Square Garden.

The dressmaker already have authorized union leaders to call the strike, which would affect 3,800 shops in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Pennsylvania.

Julius Hochman, general manager of the joint board of the dressmakers' union, ascribed the industry's difficulties to the contractor-jobber system, which he said was "running wild."

Direct intervention by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia averted a threatened strike of 20,000 elevator operators and other building service employes in the vast garment district ranging southward from Times Square.

A two-year truce was arranged also in the fur workers industry, which had been threatened with a walkout of 12,000 employes. Union leaders said they won a 10 per cent wage increase and other benefits.

At the same time, 15,000 striking millinery workers conducted a final demonstration and prepared to start returning to their jobs tomorrow, following settlement of differences that had tied up 800 shops since yesterday.

Fairfax Board Protests Burke Station Closure

Supervisors Indorse Bill for Reallocation of Road Funds.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 345, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 43-P-31.

The Board of Supervisors of Fairfax County, Va., yesterday voted to protest the closing of Burke Station by the Southern Railway as an agency freight and express station. A hearing will be held February 18 before the State Corporation Commission in Richmond.

County Treasurer Dr. F. W. Huddleson told the board this was the first year in the history of the county that the Southern Railway had not paid its county taxes prior to the dead line in December, preferring to pay the 5 per cent penalty. This tax amounts to about $14,000 annually.

The board adopted a resolution indorsing the bill now before the State Assembly amending the State secondary road law which would allow towns of less than 3,500 population to participate in the distribution of the secondary road allocations where the street of the town provides an outlet to a secondary road.

The board approved the request of the Emig Properties Co., of Washington, to have the old Fairfax road, near Burke, improved by the State Highway Department. The company offered to contribute to have the road about a half mile long graveled. The company stated that it planned to subdivide 204 acres on this road into small tracts to be sold to Government employes at a low cost.

A committee composed of Chairman W. F. P. Reid, Supervisor G. Wallace Carper and County Purchasing Agent R. M. Loughborough was appointed by the board to confer with district WPA officials and endeavor to have at least a branch office maintained at Fairfax. The Fairfax office was closed last month and all activities transferred to the Alexandria office. The National Reemployment office is located at Fairfax and at present anyone seeking WPA work must visit both offices before they can be assigned to any project.

The board again refused to transfer $1,500 to the county school fund from the dog tax fund as was agreed upon by the two boards when the budget was prepared last year. The request yesterday was made by Mrs. Bruno Wittig as a representative of the McLean School and Civic League. Previously the board had turned down numerous requests by the county school board.

An application to operate a commercial hog farm near Wakefield by M. B. Watt was rejected by the board following a public hearing.

Sheriff E. P. Kirby reported an attempted holdup Tuesday night at the home of Clarence Allison near Merrifield, Va. Sheriff Kirby said a masked bandit silently entered the kitchen of the Allison home with a drawn revolver and ordered Allison to throw up his hands.

The bandit caught her in the yard of the home, threw her to the ground and attempted to stifle her screams. Unsuccessful, he jumped into his car, which was parked in the driveway, and escaped.

George Munch, 75, of Annandale, Va., was seriously injured yesterday when struck by a truck on the Lee-Jackson highway near his home. He was taken to Alexandria Hospital by a passing motorist. It was found he was suffering from broken ribs, broken wrists, cuts about the head and face and possible internal injuries. The truck was driven by Wilbur Payton, of Alexandria. Police state they believe the aged man either slipped or walked into the path of the truck. Peyton was not arrested.

Members of the Fairfax County Business and Professional Women's Club last night voted to notify the Senate committee in charge of the race track bill of its opposition. Action was taken on request of Mrs. DuBoise Brookings, who gave a summary of the hearings she attended recently in Richmond on social security legislation which the club voted to sponsor at its last meeting.

Attorneys Map Move to Help Edith Maxwell

Two Phases of Appeal Are Completed; New Evidence Will Be Presented.

Legal strategy in the presentation of the appeal of Edith Maxwell from her conviction on a charge of killing her father with a slipper, will be mapped this week in Richmond, Va., at a conference of defense attorneys.

Two phases of the appeal—that prepared by Charles Henry Smith, of Alexandria, and that made ready by A. A. Skeen, of Wise, Va.—have already been completed. When M. J. Fulton, of Richmond, finishes his part of the case it will be ready for presentation to the Virginia Court of Appeals.

The 21-year-old mountain girl was convicted by a jury of mountaineers and faces a 25-year prison term. Evidence purported to show that she struck her father, Trigg Maxwell, with a slipper when he attacked her with a knife because she stayed out until midnight.

Blows Are Questioned.

Smith, an outstanding criminal lawyer, will attempt to get a reversal of the conviction on the ground of newly discovered evidence which purports to show that the autopsy report on the girl did not show that death was due to the slipper blows.

Skeen has prepared arguments to show to the court that the evidence presented at the trial was not sufficient to warrnat a conviction for first degree murder. To show that the girl intended to kill her father, the Commonwealth produced the story of a witness who said the girl had threatened her father, several weeks before the affray.

Procedure of Appeal.

The constitutional aspect of the case will be handled by Fulton. He is expected to argue that a Virginia law which forbids women to sit on trial and grand juries is unconstitutional and deprives women of the equal protection of the laws.

Virginia procedure in an appeal of this sort is to present a petition for a writ of error to one or all of the justices of the court. If the writ is granted it has the effect of bringing the entire case before the court for review.

If the petition is denied the only recourse of the defendant is to the United States Supreme Court. There is no doubt among some attorneys that there is sufficient grounds to carry the case to the highest court of the country.

No More Pump Priming?

President Roosevelt has announced that as much as $1,000,000,000 of unutilized authorizations to lend Government funds may be canceled.

A check-up of various emergency lending agencies, such as the HOLC, the FCA and the RFC, is to be made with a view to determining the final disposition of unexpended balances. The President took pains to point out that this procedure does not involve any reduction in contemplated budgetary outlays, nor does it affect the size of the Federal deficit in any way. All that he proposes to do is to end certain kinds of borrowing that would increase the contingent liabilities of the Government.

If this means that the Administration is preparing to relinquish various pump-priming activities, the announcement is highly significant. Undoubtedly recovery has reached a point at which emergency lending agencies ought to restrict their activities to conserving their assets and liquidating their commitments as rapidly as possible. But in the absence of definite information as to the extent of the retreat, it would be rash to express an opinion about the effect of the prospective cancellation of credits. If it is confined to such agencies as the RFC, for instance, it means little. If it marks the inauguration of a policy of general withdrawal from a field of financing usually reserved to private agencies, it is a most encouraging development.

Whatever the objectives may be, the announcement will stimulate hope that it is a prelude to a reduction in borrowing to cover current budgetary deficits. On that point, however, President Roosevelt refused to give any assurance. Indeed he objects to having the move described as a "tightening of the purse strings."

For A Safer City.

No sympathy should be wasted on local drivers who have had their permits and license plates suspended or revoked as a result of the stricter application of the traffic regulations. At last the constructive move has been made to cut down Washington's inexcusably bad traffic record. After a few more weeks of traffic court severity and after a few more drivers learn that the regulations mean what they say, an improvement in driving—not to mention walking—conditions can be confidently expected.

The police, the court and the traffic directors are to be supported in their uncompromising attitude. Let them continue this course and half a million persons will be singing paeans of thanksgiving for a safer city. But there is one unsolved problem that must not be overlooked.

It is brought out well in the articles written by The Post reporter who has been cruising daily about the District in a police car, observing traffic violations and noting the reasons for them. A driver found exceeding the speed limit of 22 miles an hour in a comparatively open section of the city protested that "no one ever travels within the speed limit" in such neighborhoods. And he was right; no one does. Nor is solution of the traffic problem facilitated by making cars crawl along broad arteries designated as through boulevards.

The whole aim of strict enforcement is to develop universal respect for the rules of the road. Conversely, disrespect is to be discouraged. Success in this hinges largely on having all the regulations above rational criticism, and then enforcing them all rigorously.

Overstrained Patience.

Unless private industry accepts its clear opportunity to build low-cost houses for workers and farmers, said Rexford G. Tugwell while discussing the aims of his Resettlement Administration earlier in the week in Cincinnati, "the pressure of public opinion may force the Government to enter this field on a very wide scale." Indeed, he added, "the time of hesitation, of study, and of patience has about run out." Interesting words, these, when one considers that the whole philosophy of Federal housing is undergoing a change.

For the Government to take up the cause of the urban and rural workers unable to afford adequate housing is reasonable enough. But before the Resettlement Administration is authorized to proceed on the "very wide scale" Mr. Tugwell foresees, it would seem well to set at rest the more than casual talk about Washington that the resettlement offices here could themselves stand a deal of straightening out.

A few months ago, to be sure, Mr. Tugwell wrote to a New York paper a strong denial that his offices are overstaffed and inefficient. Nevertheless, evidence accumulates that confusion, duplication of function, and wastefulness are the rule in the Resettlement Administration. If Mr. Tugwell is right in predicting that the Government will soon find it necessary to advance even farther into the ambitious and costly field of housing, now if ever is the time for his administration to cherish—not to turn away from—hesitation, study, and patience.

Moreover, it is more than possible that public patience with regard to Mr. Tugwell will expire even before that virtue is exhausted in respect to the construction industry.

The Borah Candidacy.

When we were all young, on the school playground, and a half-dozen boys were in the notion of fighting, somebody had to start the fracas, even if he had to be mischievously pushed by a third person.

The spell of seeming obscurantism in Presidential politics has been broken by the frank declaration of Senator Borah that he is—believe it or not—a candidate. Like a flash of lightning in a muggy dusk, his announcement serves to clarify the landscape. From now on it should be easier for all candidates to get the various issues into form and view, without mumbo-jumbo, cabalistic ritual or pretended mystery.

Senator Borah's issues, as an assortment, do not make an impressive showing. Isolationism is incantation to a withered past. Another of his planks is a patent sop to Townsendism. His saying as to a so-called managed inflation is a gesture neither to right nor left, but straight up. And so it goes.

But on one issue he may prove to be of incalculable service to his party and to his country. That is in the matter of constitutionalism, which is now the subject of much sophistical and devious rationalizing.

By almost supernatural ingenuity and good luck the Roosevelt supporters have managed to get away with the pretense that their opponents are committed to a static, unchangeable Constitution, and that the Democratic Party is a lone and virtuous champion of change, to meet changing conditions. The Republicans, incredible as it seems, have permitted them to get away with that assumption.

The real issue, of course, is as to whether the Constitution shall be changed by the people, as contemplated by its horse-and-buggy authors, or by the whim or contrivance of an executive or Congress, without due process of vote.

Senator Borah's stout and exceedingly intelligent championship of the Constitution is, and will be, an impressive and effective ministry to true and progressive democracy. He will dramatize the fact that the safety and purity of a liberal democracy rests with the preservation of our unique constitutional process—the vital and integrated growth of the basic law through the spontaneous, deliberate, quiet and express mandate of the people, without cunning short-cuts or bolsterous, brain-trust bluffing. So great a liberal as Woodrow Wilson enunciated the principle that the Supreme Court is the refuge of liberal government, and it is not difficult to demonstrate the validity of his thesis.

The Presidential primary in Ohio may provide a campaign that will be educational to the country as a whole, for Senator Borah always speaks impressively, and has a large and respectful following. If he works along this line he may correct the rather widespread fallacy above indicated, and will thereby perform a service of incalculable value.

It does not seem at all likely today that he can be nominated. He is erratic, entirely unaccustomed to organization, an evangelist for or against this-and-that with little taste for administrative routine. His long career in Congress gives small evidence of aptitude for the exacting duties of the Presidency. But he can perform an important and highly patriotic service by dramatizing certain issues. And so, whether you think he would make a good President or not, you may hail his announcement as a service in clarifying a number of muddled issues.

Memo For Glassblowers.

Soon the phrase "people who live in glass houses" will be more than just a figure of speech. For exhaustive research has demonstrated that this breakable medium can be used for buildings, pots and pans, and even hats. Great blocks of translucent glass may form the bungalow of the future, allowing a soft light to be diffused throughout the rooms without fear of Peeping Toms, since it will not be transparent. Then there would be no more necessity for window-washing because there would be no more windows. Curtains would pass into the limbo of outmoded household furnishings such as bead portieres and hand-painted sofa pillows.

As for the glass cooking vessels, it seems that science is at last doing right by the bridegroom. Mrs. Newlywed will have no alibi for burning up the dinner once she can lift up the pan and see what's going on down at the bottom. In the countless laboratory tests made before perfection was gained, tons of potatoes and thousands of pounds of hamburger gave their all in the name of culinary progress, only to end up in smoke. However, the chemists feel that even these figures are negligible beside the number of meals that may now be saved from the altar of burnt sacrifice.

At any rate, the innovation of glass houses and glass frying pans does not seem wholly fantastic. But it is going to take more than scientists and milliners to persuade the public to discard felts and straws in favor of breakable hats. For how would the social climber manage to conceal the bee in her bonnet? Besides, March winds are just around the corner. It's embarrassing enough to have your hat blow off. Are manufacturers prepared to guarantee that one will not be further humiliated by having to stop and pick up the pieces?

A Great Opportunity.

After eighteen months of inquiry and the expenditure of close to $200,000, the Senate Munitions Committee is nearing the end of its hearings. In the pursuit of its mandate to "investigate the activities" of manufacturers and distributors "of arms, munitions or implements of war" an enormous amount of testimony, relevant and irrelevant, has been taken. The committee has had unhampered access to secret files and unpublished records. It has had every facility necessary to make a report and recommendations of really vital national importance.

The potential significance of the committee's report is the greater because of the ugly snarl into which pending neutrality legislation has fallen. Criticized from many angles, and by many divergent groups, there is now a real likelihood that the Pittman-McReynolds bill will not be passed by February 29, when present temporary and limited neutrality legislation expires. Presumably this would mean reenactment of the latter admittedly unsatisfactory law, characterized by President Roosevelt as in certain respects likely to "drag us into war instead of keeping us out."

It is no secret that the pending substitute for this temporary neutrality law is not regarded as ideal by the Department of State. Its drafting officers, in formulating the Pittman-McReynolds measure, have had to consider many curious prejudices, such as the insensate hostility of a few Senators to any American co-operation with the League of Nations and the pathetically fatuous belief that the country can be kept out of war merely by passing legislation on the subject. But, in spite of these influences, the Administration bill has many constructive features on which there can be all but universal agreement. Moreover, a few revisions could make it a measure which would be definitely helpful to the cause of world peace.

The duty and the opportunity of the Senate Munitions Committee is to assist in the passage of worth-while neutrality legislation before the expiration of the present stop-gap act. And its responsibility in this connection is heightened by the fact that the committee's protracted hearings have so greatly aroused public opinion. Having labored so long in the limelight, these Senators cannot afford to produce a futile, shallow or misleading report.

There have been times when their investigation has seemed grossly to oversimplify the problems at issue. There have been times when it has spread the impression that peace depends merely on controlling munition makers and international bankers. In its deliberate report, however, the Senate Munitions Committee should be able to place all these considerations in fair and unbiased proportions. It should be able to say, cogently and convincingly, just what sort of neutrality legislation offers the most promise for keeping the United States at peace.

If the Nye committee uses any real reflection in the preparation of its report to the Senate it will, of course, reach the same conclusion that underlies the thinking of the Department of State, and indeed of every serious American student of international relations. The only promising way for the United States to stay at peace is to assist in creating the conditions necessary for world peace. No elaborate system of safeguards designed to secure neutrality will serve to keep this world power out of another protracted world war. The only guarantee of peace for the United States lies in the building of a system capable of preventing the fires of large-scale war from breaking out again.

Even against prejudiced and bigoted opposition it is possible to have legislation which will combine appreciation of this reality with an honest endeavor to preserve neutrality in another war for as long as fundamental national interests permit. If it serves to further legislation of this character the Senate Munitions Committee will efface recollection of its many tactical errors, and will more than justify its appointment by contributing substantially to the cause of permanent peace.

The Minority Opinion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

So much attention is focussed on the majority opinion of the decision of the Supreme Court invalidating the AAA that, although of no legal effect, the force of the minority opinion has been lost.

An examination of the dissenting opinion offers a thesis for the assumption that the fundamental charter of our Government may have to undergo changing in order to bring about an interpretation of the law consonant with present day needs. The biting acid of realism places the minority opinion in bold relief, and judicial notice was taken of "the depressed state of agriculture."

Many conflicting authorities were sifted, the dissenters reaching the anomalous "conclusion . . . that results become lawful when they are incidents of those powers (regulation of inter-State commerce and levying duties on imports) but unlawful when incident to the similarly granted power to tax and spend." Their closing words express a beneficent intent when interpreting the same powers: "That the power to tax and spend includes the power to relieve a nation-wide economic maladjustment by conditional gifts of money."

The sovereign people, from whom all power flows in our system of government, will find a way to decide if the Supreme Court is to remain the ultimate arbiter of the welfare of the Nation.

GUY D'AULBY.

An Italian Grieves.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Last week in Washington I was extremely grieved to learn of the sudden passing of Mr. Frank H. Simonds, that great writer and reporter gifted with that most precious quality: accuracy.

As a loyal American citizen of Italian extraction, I am sure I voice the feelings of millions of Italo-Americans in proclaiming my undying gratitude for the great Frank Simonds the gentleman who, at every occasion, showed a high sense of justice and fair play for my mother country, Italy.

May his soul rest in peace.

E. L. MIOTTO.

Father Coughlin's Economics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have always suspected that the Rev. Mr. Coughlin does not know what he is talking about when he speaks on economic and financial matters. Since the Treasury Department answered him on his statement regarding the Nation's gold supply, I am firmly convinced that he is a false alarm and that his statements are just hot air.

It is a pity that such men are allowed to fill the air with fallacy and wind at the expense of the poor people who give him money to carry on his program.

FREDERICK E. HORSTMANN.

New York City, Feb. 3.

Resettlement's Record.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I have been very much interested in your recent editorials and articles on the national housing situation. To my mind it is one of the needy and worthy fields of exploration and operation.

The employment directly and indirectly affected by operation of a gigantic national building program would go a long way in putting our jobless to work. Hundreds of industries, too, would be benefited by purchase of materials and supplies. Occupants of new homes would make millions of purchases in equipping these homes. The combined effect upon business conditions at large cannot be estimated.

The Federal Government cannot build low-cost houses—that is, low cost to builder and buyer. If Government agencies now building houses charged their administrative expenses, the selling price, if based on actual cost, would make the sale of such houses prohibitive from an investment standpoint.

Sometime ago, you said editorially, that the Resettlement Administration's Washington pay roll amounted to $1,750,000 per month. This amount would build nearly 1,000 low-cost houses. So at this rate the Government is building (on paper) about 12,000 houses per year in which only moths will live.

However, before condeming, let the Resettlement Administration tell the public how much money it has spent to date and how many houses it has to show for the amount. I think it would be interesting to see a show down on this point.

Thank You.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Would you be good enough to accept our congratulations on the very excellent work which is being performed by your editorial department in connection with the local traffic situation?

Your idea of having a reporter travel with one of the regular traffic officers is a new and most novel one. The follow-up material has been entertainingly prepared, constructively written and should go a long way toward assisting in the reduction of accidents and fatalities by graphically calling public attention to the situation which confronts a traffic officer almost every time a person is apprehended for some violation.

Please keep up the good work.

Manager, Keystone Automobile Club.

Abuse Of The Word Liberty.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The current use of the word liberty does great violence to the original meaning and intent of that term.

Since the industrial revolution, man has been emancipated from the political tyrant only to fall under the industrial tyranny of the machine age. This Frankenstein which he has made but cannot control has given the word a different definition and meaning than that imputed to it in the good old horse and buggy days. The machine makes mass production necessary; mass production makes individual liberty impossible.

The industrial worker in shop and mine and factory cannot even dream of the personal liberty of the farmer in the olden days, who was monarch of all he surveyed. Machinery makes regimentation inevitable; the industrial worker can have little more personal liberty than the bee in the hive. His task is set, his wages fixed and the hours of his going and coming appointed.

When the progressives and liberals of this day, as exemplified by Franklin D. Roosevelt and William E. Borah, indulge in the terms rights and liberty, they mean the right of the individual to share more equitably in the fruits of industry which his labor makes possible. They know full well that the common man cannot return to the bygone days of unrestricted individual freedom as contemplated by Thomas Jefferson before the coming of the railroad, the steamship, the telegraph, the automobile and the radio. Common honesty compels the prediction that the average man will be subject to more and more, rather than less and less collective control as machinery becomes more fully developed and perfected.

On the other hand, when the conservatives and reactionaries, typified by former President Hoover and Jewett Shouse, proclaim individual liberty as it prevailed when the Constitution was written, they do not mean to include the common man who works with his hands and earns his living from the sweat of his face, but rather liberty for an artificial person which legal ingenuity has created, known as the corporation. There is to be liberty for the rugged individual who manipulates the corporations, but under their scheme the forgotten man who does the work will have little more liberty than the galley slave.

The right of the wolf to devour the sheep must be restrained in order that the sheep may live.

Washington, Jan. 23.

Transit Suggestion.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

As one who has given up the use of his car for the winter, in order to do his bit toward relieving downtown congestion and probably indirectly contributing a mite toward fewer accidents, I feel that the street cars should have treated me a little better. I write from a sick bed, following a week of being dumped from one warm car to the icy blasts of exposed landing platforms to change to another car.

Nowhere in the city do I find any shelter provided for those who are forced to change cars—except that found in public doorways from which one must bolt into the path of a pack of cruising taxis unleashed by the green light.

I have been in "hick towns" that provided better protection from pneumonia than this beautiful city. In all seasons I could do with a little less beauty and a deal more safety and comfort at Fifteenth and New York avenue. An elevated pagoda built at this intersection, having moving staircases, would unscramble pedestrians from the general melee of rushing taxicabs and swinging street cars. Passengers could enter doubledeck cars from above, thus leaving the streets free for traffic. Double-deck cars would give seats to strap-hangers who have paid for a seat.

Isn't it barely possible that the traffic situation could be improved by weaning people away from their private locomotives with better transit facilities?

The Appointment Of Mrs. Long.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

"Huey Long's Proxy," in which the appointment of their widows to fill unexpired terms of deceased Congressmen is deprecated, is another one of those timely Post editorials which distinctly ring the bell.

The wonder is that in the last few years there has not been a very noticeable number of authoritative voices lifted in vigorous protest against the indicated stultification of our National Legislature. It is safe to say that many right-minded citizens will heartily applaud The Post for its outspoken attitude, especially in view of the reluctance with which an editorial writer might be supposed to indulge in candid comment under the circumstances.

In view of the amazing, not to say dangerous, political complications by which the country is now distracted and the urgent need for restoration of legislative integrity, The Post is not unduly harsh in saying: "But every time a woman is elevated to a position of great influence merely for sentimental reasons it becomes the more difficult for those who are really trained for effective public work to win recognition."

It will be bad enough when, in the coming generation, regular ballot-box feminists hold the balance of power in Congress with the probability that a woman President will be elected not a very great many years thereafter.

TIPTON TALBOTT.

Washington, Feb. 3.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

The appointment of the wife of a recently assassinated Senator to fill his unexpired term is indeed regrettable in view of the appointee's purported lack of interest in public affairs to date. Such appointments have but one effect—they tend to undermine public confidence, already fast ebbing, in the ability of the legislative branch of the Government.

Thanks to age limit requirements of the Constitution we have not yet reached the place where children and children's children of former Congressmen may be appointed to fill such vacancies.

"Give A Dog A Bad Name."

AFTER he had finished furnishing helpful advice to youth through the Saturday Evening Post, our onetime friend the late Senator Albert J. Beveridge wrote a life of John Marshall. It was a worthy contribution to the art of biography. It is the best account of its great subject which has yet appeared. And we recommend it to your study during the present open season for the Constitution and the Supreme Court.

But we have discovered that the work isn't perfect. It commits one serious sin—a sin of omission.

* * *

It doesn't say a word about the Chief Justice's next-door neighbor's dog.

* * *

To be sure, there is some excuse. The biographer consulted all the Marshall sources then available. He assembled an impressive mass of material. The trouble was that, in Beveridge's time, the dog-data lay buried beyond human ken.

* * *

Well, in this respect, the Post-Impressionist has some advantage over the Senator. Although our information is sadly incomplete, it gives what other detectives call a fat lead. So we propose to present it—whereupon some reader will perhaps follow it to its historic finish.

The College of William and Mary, where the future Chief Justice learned his law—or, rather, began the lifelong process of learning it—"has just acquired a highly interesting collection of Marshall papers, whose existence has hitherto been unknown." Such is the phraseology of the formal announcement, more cryptic than even most formal announcements, seeing that it leaves in mystery the identity of the collection's collector—or collectors.

Among these papers, anyhow, are letters "written to the jurist by the great men of his day, or by him to them. Others (are) more personal," being notes addressed by him to his wife "to whom he was extremely devoted." Finally, some seem to be drafts, or his own copies, of missives intended for persons of no fame—and perhaps of no affection.

Among the last-named group is the document now in question.

* * *

The place: The city of Richmond, Va., where Marshall and his wife were established.

The reason: Mrs. Marshall's poor health, combined with the noisiness of a pet.

* * *

The letter, intended for this dog's owner, explains that the animal's bark had "scarcely left Mrs. Marshall a night of quiet since the beginning of summer." On the night before the jurist took pen in hand, she could secure no more than a total of two hours' repose:

"Her situation," declared her husband, "is deplorable, and if this state of things continues she cannot live."

* * *

The Chief Justice didn't like to complain—or said he didn't. But what else could he do?

Mrs. Marshall was an ill woman. And she was, it would appear, a strong-minded woman—as you may gather from what follows.

* * *

For this letter of either a distracted or an ironic husband goes on:

"Rather than ask what it may be disagreeable to you to do, I would without hesitation abandon my house, and have proposed it to her; but our little place in the country affords her only a confined and hot air chamber in which she thinks she cannot live. She therefore insists on my communicating her situation directly to you, in the hope that, when it is known, the cause may not be continued."

"It is most painful to me that anything in the circumstances of my family should interfere in the slightest degree with the inclination of a neighbor . . . I have refrained as long as possible from applying to you on this irksome subject."

* * *

And there is, almost femininely, a postscript. Just to cover the whole case, Marshall adds:

"We should take refuge among our friends in the upper country, but my wife cannot travel, and cannot sleep in a house with a family."

* * *

That's all The Post-Impressionist can give you concerning the affair—unless it be a wager that John Marshall, being a lawyer, didn't go to law over it. The document does not so much as mention the name of the neighbor, let alone the breed of the brute.

But greatness lends importance to all that touches it. So we appeal to your industry and patriotism to fill the void: to find out what the writer wanted done with the dog—whether the neighbor did it—and, above all, whether the Chief Justice showed his wife the letter before he sent it.

London, Paris, Rome

London, Feb. 5.

THE death of King George has had a depressing effect on the night life of London, which continues to be felt even after the long and elaborate ceremonies of the funeral, but, even so, the wealth and extravagance of the capital are still apparent, in sharp contrast to conditions in Rome and Paris.

London is strictly a white-tie town, and the smoking jacket which suffices for formal evening dress elsewhere is only a degree above the turtle-neck sweater and the omelette-colored cap. In public premises where the spendthrifts of England gather to commit debauchery by night the customer is required to pass the headwaiter's inspection, and the headwaiter prefers tails, although he will not actually turn back a client who shows up wearing a black tie and a solvent appearance.

On the cost of living I have no data, for life in a London hotel which has an orchestra, an American bar and a flunkey in golden velvet bloomers to spin the revolving door has nothing in common with that of the family in the suburbs. Hotel life, however, is about on a par with that of New York or Washington, and there is an appearance of prosperity not only in the dress of the people but in the traffic and the stores.

Even those people who are members of what might be called the working classes are well covered and apparently well fed and content, and certainly no country enjoys the unanimity of devotion to a national shrine which the English exhibited last week. It is true that they were worked upon by the greatest ballyhoo machine in the world, with aristocracy turning the crank, but there were no terrorists with bayonets, castor oil or writs of banishment to compel them to make this demonstration of loyalty and sorrow.

• • • •

THERE is no unanimity in the United States or France, where opinion is reasonably free, and, of course, the loud enthusiasm of the people in the lands of the dictators discredits itself. Nobody ever accepts at face value the protestations of love which come from the groom at a shotgun wedding, and the cries of "Deochay!" and "Heil, Hitler!" are subject to the same discount.

The trial of a suit in which a rich gambler told of betting $5,000 on a card has evoked none of the obvious comparisons between life in the stylish West End of London and life in the Welsh coal mines and the lower classes seem to be well in hand.

It is in the luxury trades that the contrast is clearest between England's prosperity and the poverty of Italy and France. Great, luxurious automobiles are common on the streets of London, much less common in Paris and rare in Rome. The more modest popular cars to be seen in London are newer and more numerous than those in Paris, while in Rome an automobile of any sort is a great luxury. The West End shops are selling jewelry and actually moving their merchandise, whereas in Paris the great jewelers stand for days behind their counters without greeting a customer, and a man wanting a new flywheel for a $10 watch is welcomed with open arms.

• • • •

NEVERTHELESS, all costs are high in Paris, and the few tourists who have been venturing over various borders this winter have discovered better goods at lower prices in Italy.

Strangely, the night life of Paris is amazingly expensive, and I heard of one unfortunate, a Frenchman at that, who was charged $42 for one bottle of champagne in a night club and almost started a revolution, but finally paid off.

In London, in their profound respect for law, they have invented a device called the bottle party which is conducted in a resort having the characteristics of the American speakeasy of prohibition times. The customer pays dues in lieu of cover charge and signs an order for vast quantities of liquor to be paid for as consumed. There are other details, but that conveys the idea. His bottle is supposed to be withdrawn from his great private stock.

Thousands of Englishmen went to Switzerland for the winter sports at Christmas—an extravagance which few French or Italians could afford—and there is evidence everywhere to corroborate the Italians' bitter complaint that Britain is enormously rich but won't let a poor nation spread out and make a dollar the same way that she got hers.

Radical Break-Up

Shooting Of Minneapolis Editor Marks Disintegration Of Northwest Movement, Splitting Farmer-Labor Ranks On Left.

By Hilding Sivertsen,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Minneapolis.

THE recent shooting of Walter Liggett, radical newspaperman and enemy of Gov. Floyd Olson, of Minnesota, is one of the more violent symptoms of the disintegration of the radical movement of the Northwestern States, which began about the year 1915 with the ascendancy of A. C. Townley, leader of the Nonpartisan League.

Townley once became a real political power in the Dakotas and Minnesota and to some extent in Iowa, Wisconsin and Nebraska and looked forward confidently to a national career. Senator Frazier, of North Dakota, and other members of the so-called Progressive group in Congress, owe much of their success to the groundwork laid by Townley, who has now practically dropped out of sight. The Farmer-Labor movement, exemplified by Magnus Johnson, Shipstead and Gov. Olson, was an outgrowth of the Nonpartisan League agitation in conjunction with Socialist activity.

Recently William Langer, of North Dakota, attracted considerable attention by being put out of the governorship after having espoused the radical cause. It is noteworthy, in pasing, that Langer once opposed Townley.

• • • •

THERE have been many shifts in the radical movement in the Northwestern and North Central States in the last 20 years, for personal ambitions brought see-sawing and scramble for office, and the alignments have altered so frequently that no one but a very close observer can trace all the intricacies of the changing scene.

Friends of the late Walter Liggett, editor of a paper called the Mid-West American, are accusing the "Olson machine" of being responsible for his shooting, and are saying that Olson is a radical in language only. They claim that he is really lined up with Big Business and racketeers. Regardless of whether there is any truth to these accusations, it is obvious that the radical movement is torn by many conflicting currents.

The writer will not attempt to trace the complex history of the entire movement, but will merely go back into history to review some of the casual factors.

• • • •

BACK in 1914 Dr. E. F. Ladd, president of the North Dakota State Agricultural College, started an agitation against excessive "dockage," which means deduction from the elevator price of a bushel of wheat due to alleged inferiority due to chaff, moisture, shriveled grain or other defect. At about the same time the Equity Society of North Dakota took up similar grievances and proposed State-owned elevators to compete with the big grain commission men of the Minneapolis Board of Trade.

There was a great deal of dissatisfaction among the farmers, and a half-dozen I. W. W. Socialist publicists heard about it. One was Arthur LeSueur, member of the I. W. W. Another was A. C. Townley, Socialist lecturer. A third was D. C. Coates, a former city commissioner of Spokane, elected on the Socialist ticket, later Lieutenant Governor of Colorado. A. E. Bowen, another Socialist, was a fourth.

They decided to form what was known as the Farmers Nonpartisan League, and Townley was made president and LeSueur executive secretary. Apparently they decided that it would be smart politics to cash in on the farmers' discontent. They charged $16 to join the league, which was also smart politics, because when a farmer had once paid money into an organization, he was more likely to stay with it than if he had gotten in free. The leaders made considerable money for themselves, and chose Lynn Frazier, a farmer, to run for Governor.

• • • •

OLD party lines were shattered in the uprising, which resembled that of the Populists in Kansas in the nineties, except that the Populists had had no truck with Socialists. The North Dakota program included State ownership of elevators, packing houses and other manufacturing and commercial projects. The Nonpartisan League made a clean sweep in North Dakota and then started in on Minnesota, South Dakota and other States.

By this time the United States had gotten into the World War, and the league at first boldly opposed the war and got into hot water for radically pacifistic tendencies, along the line of the current I. W. W. and Socialist proclivities.

The late Theodore Roosevelt, in 1918, shortly before his death, started on the trail of the Nonpartisan League and came out flatly against the radical leadership, including the elder LaFollette in his castigations. This fact is interesting in view of recent developments.

The effort of Townley was to effect a partnership between the farmers and organized labor, in fact his effort even went so far as to attempt a liaison between his league and the I. W. W., though the latter organization had been repeatedly convicted of sabotage, including the burning of wheat stacks, the throwing of pitchforks into threshing machines and similar efforts to cripple farm operations. This effort failed.

• • • •

THE State ownership program was partially carried out, but was not very successful. Business men shunned the State and the agitators did not prove good administrators. After experimentation with a method of social control which was indorsed by Upton Sinclair and other leftists, the program faded and lost vitality, and is now largely a matter of history.

Many of the leaders got to fighting among themselves, and the State of North Dakota became a battle-ground of shifting personal ambitions. Frazier went to the United States Senate and has managed to keep going all through the trials and tribulations of his former comrades-at-arms, and the variously shifting alignments which have become too complex for an outsider to understand.

Minneapolis once had a Socialist Mayor, Van Lear, and has always been a fertile ground for radical leadership, so when Floyd Olson, county attorney of Hennepin County, decided to run for Governor on the Farmer-Labor ticket, he had pretty good luck.

Other Farmer-Laborities have come and gone. Some have stayed. There is at least a formal and outward joining of farmer and labor forces, though there are natural obstacles to a genuine union which seem insuperable.

• • • •

THE murder of Liggett casts a sinister light on the Northwestern political situation. Radicals everywhere in the country have become more or less worked up over it. The conservatives of both old parties, of course, stand outside, looking in. The advent of the New Deal, especially the Tugwell philosophy, adds another complication. What will be the outcome in the shake-up of next fall? Nobody knows, but one thing is certain: The leftists in the Northwest are so split up by a wide variety of interests and ambitions that it would be miraculous if they were to present a united front against the conservatives.

us, not as possessions but as mandatories."

He added that Germany had some excuse for violating the Treaty of Versailles and rearming because of the Stresa conference, in which Britain, France and Italy pledged mutual military assistance in case either were attacked—generally believed to have been aimed principally at Nazi Germany.

Parley Turned Down.

London, Feb. 5.—The House of Commons turned down today a proposal to sponsor a new international peace conference, but affirmed its confidence the government will "take all practicable steps to promote international prosperity."

The suggestion for a peace round-table came on the motion of George Lansbury, 77-year-old Laborite, and was defeated, 228 to 137.

Lansbury called the European situation a "nightmare" and asked the meaning of recent meetings of monarchs and statesmen in Paris.

"Does it mean exactly the same thing as occurred before 1914?" he queried. "Some match, perhaps accidentally, will be put to the powder magazine and we will be called on to send young and middle-aged to fight."

Lansbury's resolution drew the support of Dr. Alfred Salter, Laborite, who named Japan, Italy and Germany as nations "whose present actions appear to threaten the future peace of the world."

Leisure Class

By Karl Schriftgiesser

Philosopher Morgan

ON Tuesday afternoon I slipped into a telephone booth in the Senate Office Building and called my wife. "Darling," I said, "I have news for you. We are at last members of the leisure class." There was a momentary silence and then she said, "What did they fire you for?" I had expected that kind of reaction and was prepared. "They didn't fire me. I'm at the munitions hearing and have just been talking with J. P. Morgan and he said . . ."

"Don't tell me he has invited you into the firm," she said, visualizing, I am sure, a veritable rain of fur coats and yachts suddenly being poured at the front door.

"No," I said, "I'm not important enough to be bought out by the interests."

And then I went on to explain that Mr. Morgan had just told the Nye committee that if you destroy the leisure class you also destroy civilization and that we members of the working press, not thinking of ourselves for the minute, had asked him to amplify his philosophical remark. And he had obliged by saying that the leisure class included anyone who "can afford to employ a maid." To be sure, he smiled when he said that.

• • • •

I AM afraid I gave the wife an undue jolt, for she did not seem to be amused. And, anyway, I thought after hanging up, the Schriftgiessers are members of the leisure class only on Monday, Wednesday and Friday between 9 a. m. and 4 p. m. And that doesn't do me much good because between those hours the head of the family, meaning me, is at the office, or listening to Mr. Morgan philosophize, or otherwise earning a living, and the rest of the family isn't doing anything very exciting, either.

Being a member of Morgan's leisure class is nothing to get steamed up about, it seems, for Mr. Morgan, who has a way with figures, estimates that there are some 30,000,000 families in the country who could be so designated. It's much more distinguished to be among the unemployed, for the highest figure for that class is set at only 11,000,000. But being in either category is nothing to get snobbish about.

• • •

MR. MORGAN was in a genial mood when he chatted with the part-time members of the leisure class and not at all averse to answering questions. Someone asked him to connect the leasure class with the civilization which he says it will save. One was even so bold as to suggest, sotto voce, that there was something un-American in his remarks and that they went against the very background of this country, its foundations and all that. This is what he said:

"Well, I think that if the housemother has to do all the cooking and washing and bring up a family of five children besides, she won't have time to educate the children."

What would Abraham Lincoln say to that, or Al Smith? That's not the kind of philosophy that made John Raskob a great man. It's almost an insult to American Womanhood, Who's Who and Eddie Guest.

For the history of our great and glorious country is filled with success story after success story of hundreds of noted men who earned at their servantless mothers' knee all they needed to know to amass fortunes comparable with Mr. Morgan's. John D. Rockefeller, on his farm in upper New York State, worked in the fields and was taught by his pious mother, who spent long days in the hot kitchen while her husband was out selling coal-oil medicine in far countries. John D. was but one of a larger family, but he managed to make good. The list could be made long and impressive if one wanted to take the time.

MR. MORGAN was probably on more familiar ground when he discussed taxation with the committee and told its members what it should do was to legislate, not for 20 or 30 people, but for 20 or 30 millions of people, in the matter of taxation. I wouldn't know about that. For, except upon those days and in those hours already designated, I am not of the leisure class, but a member of the proletariat. Taxation has never worried me to any great extent.

Huge, rumbling, and somewhat magnificent, Mr. Morgan is a most impressive gentleman. He knows more about international banking than those who would question him. But, like his father before him, he is more a symbol than an individual. I am not convinced he is half the ogre that some would have him. But I am convinced that when he tries to tell 30,000,000 American families that they are members of the leisure class he has got to slide like the dickens if he thinks he is going to make first base.

France Will Get Loan From Britain

Paris, Feb. 5 (AP).—A British loan to enable France, her treasury virtually empty, to finance the government until a revival of confidence makes a home loan possible will be announced soon, it was reported reliably today.

The loan of 3,000,000,000 francs (about $201,000,000) was discussed by Foreign Minister Pierre-Etienne Flandin while in London recently.

Continuing budget deficits and decreasing tax payments have made the treasury almost bare and resulted in a pressing need for money.

Marcel Regnier, minister of finance, is expected to get a loan with about 3 per cent interest in London, while here he would have to pay from 5 to 6 per cent.

The Bank of France is opposing a British loan because it thinks it would further weaken the government's financial prestige and make a domestic loan even more difficult.

Nazi Leaders Move to Block Threat of Riots

Jewish Groups Forbidden to Meet After Gustloff Assassination.

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Feb. 5.—The German government acted to forestall anti-Semitic riots tonight after demanding that the Swiss government "discover and prosecute those behind the murder" of Wilhelm Gustloff, Nazi leader in Switzerland.

Gustloff was assassinated yesterday in Davos by David Frankfurter, a Jew.

Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, minister of propaganda, forbade all Jewish cultural organizations, such as theater groups, to meet until further notice.

The Jewish Telegraphic Agency said in a dispatch from Berlin the order was the "first reprisal against the German Jews" for the death of Gustloff.

Political Murder.

In an official communication through its minister to Berne, the Nazi government called the slaying "a serious affair, which without a doubt was a political murder."

"Clearly it was a sequel to the leftist press campaign against Gustloff, which continued despite the Gerrman minister's protests," the note ssaid.

Danzig police took precautions to check any anti-Jewish repercussions of the Gustloff slaying. Streets there have been quiet since Monday, when Jews were attacked and windows smashed.

(The Jewish Telegraphic Agency said Goebbel's announcement of the suspension of Jewish cultural activities explained it was "in order to prevent anti-Jewish disturbances as a result of the assassination.")

(The dispatch added that Jews believed there would be no further reprisals "until after the conclusion of the winter Olympic games at Garmisch - Partenkirchen, which open tomorrow.")

Hero's Funeral Planned.

Honors of a national hero and martyr to the Nazi cause await Gustloff. He will be buried in this country, at Schwerin-Mecklenberg.

The killing was bitterly commented on by Nazi newspapers, which eulogized Gustloff as a personification of German patriotism and condemned his slayer as a Jewish tool of international Jewish and Marx intrigues against Hitler Germany.

The assassination "tears the humanitarian, democratic bourgeois mask from Jewish immigration," said one paper.

The slaying, asserted the Nazi Partie Korrexpondez, should open the eyes of governments everywhere to the menace of Jewish emigrants who "see as their mission the poisoning of international relationships."

Said Hitler's own newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter:

"Nazi Germany, from the hier of its shot party group leader, renews its oath to proceed without compromise in preserving the German people for eternity from the slavery of international Jewery."

Tension Believed Eased.

Davos, Switzerland, Feb. 5 (AP).—Danger of strained relations between Switzerland and Germany was believed lessened tonight with police satisfied the confessed assassin of Wilhelm Gustloff, leader of Switzerland's German Nazis, is not a Swiss citizen.

The slayer, David Frankfurter, 26, a Jewish medical student, told authorities he is a Yugoslav.

The slayer told police he shot the 41-year-old Gustloff in the latter's apartment yesterday to avenge the Jews in Germany.

Flags of German consulates in Switzerland were placed at half-staff today in recognition of the leadership of Gustloff, who was reported to have been personally appointed by Adolf Hitler.

Leftist newspapers here had accused Gustloff of "political spying." A law against such activity was passed after the alleged kidnaping of Berthold Jacobs, a Jewish journalist, on Swiss soil by a Nazi agent. Jacobs was taken across the border into Germany and arrested, Switzerland charged in a protest which resulted in his surrender by Germany to this country.

Police quoted Frankfurter as saying the five bullets he fired into Gustloff's body should have struck Hitler, but that he did all he could by removing the man who "poisoned the atmosphere here."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Trappy Days Are Here Again.

Golf has turned the corner. The depression in the divot digging industry is over. Golf clubs are looking forward to the best year since Coolidge.

• • • •

The president of the United States Golf Association says the slump in golf is over and that at last our golf clubs are getting out of the red, with strong indications that the Vanishing American—the golfer who didn't care what it cost if he could play with the right people—will soon be back in all his glory.

• • • •

Before long we may even see a revival of the period when a golf club could afford to be fussy about its members, and a membership committee dared reject an applicant with money enough to pay his dues.

• • • •

What an era it was up to 1929! There were more golf clubs than golfers. And you couldn't tell at a glance whether some of those buildings were country clubs or new postoffices.

• • • •

They had dining rooms larger than the golf courses and locker rooms had become so vast that it was like undressing in New York's Pennsylvania Railroad depot.

• • • •

And those swimming pools! At the height of the prosperity era a course with no Roman Pool was so plebian that even the caddies sneered at it. Golf had come to be as expensive as polo. If you wished to join a first-class club you had to float a loan, get yourself underwritten and divorce your wife if the membership committee didn't approve of her.

• • • •

If you got in you had triumphed socially and financially, although your backswing might still be strictly of the back-alley type.

• • • •

It was expensive but you loved it. You got news of new assessments between putts and you couldn't get in and out of a shower bath without being notified of an increase in greens fees.

• • • •

Then came the big wind. Golfers blew out of those de luxe clubs like leaves before an autumn gale, not stopping to see what their last house bill was.

• • • •

The membership committees became very lenient, if a golfer with $50 in cash came near the building they dragged him in, gave him a full membership and bought him a dinner and guaranteed him a silver cup in the spring tournament.

• • • •

But things look better now. There is laughter in the locker rooms again and a few of the more prominent clubs can afford to put water in the swimming pools once more.

Na Chance.

Just what Mrs. Huey Long will stand for in the United States Senate is undetermined, but this department will lay 500 to 1 that, being a woman, she will never be heard advocating the "Every man a king!" movement.

This is going to be a great campaign for phrase makers. Gov. Landon's "fuzzy thinking" crack is a good one, but the best to date is Gov. Talmadge's, "The New Deal can't work until somebody invents an ointment that will take the place of sweat!"

Hi:

The most forward-looking accomplishment of the Roosevelt Administration—take it from a New Yorker—was the Alaskan colonization project which took all those people away from the cold weather in the United States.

Italian Troops Resume Drive On AddisAbaba

By the United Press.

Rome, Feb. 5.—The Italian war machine on the southern front of Ethiopia resumed its advance towards Addis Ababa today after a week's pause.

Motorized cavalry, followed by long columns of infantry, pushed forward through the valleys of the Gestro and Dawa Parma Rivers towards the Great Rift Valley, or Southern Lakes region, from which Emperor Haile Selassie's capital is easily accessible.

The Ethiopian garrison at Lama Scillindi was defeated after a vigorous battle, it was announced officially, and the town was occupied by Gen. Rodolfo Graziani's troops.

Serious fighting also occurred near Malca Guba on the Dawa Parma River, a communique said. The Ethiopians were routed after suffering heavy casualties. Numerous prisoners were reported taken by Gen. Graziani's troops, in addition to arms and an entire supply train.

Italians are enthusiastic over recent Fascist successes in East Africa, but an air of apprehension hung over Rome tonight as the League of Nations pondered an oil embargo against Italy, which Premier Mussolini has warned may mean war.

However, a government spokesman in a press interview denied foreign reports that Italy will mobilize 1,000,000 Neopolitan soldiers in event an embargo is applied.

The spokesman also denied reports from abroad that Italian soldiers, en route to East Africa, mutinied at Port Said, and that Gens. Santini and Maravigna will be recalled from duty in Ethiopia. He described Ethiopian assertions that 1,700 Italian soldiers were killed over the week-end on the southern front as "fantastic and false."

Pope's Position Known.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Feb. 5.—Pope Pius already has spoken and acted in the "great threat" confronting Europe, the Vatican City newspaper Osservatore Romano said tonight.

The editorial, issued on the eve of the pontiff's celebration tomorrow of the fourteenth anniversary of his election, was interpreted as answering any possible reproach that his holiness has not stopped the Italo-Ethiopian war.

Society Braves Icy Blasts to Attend Last 'At Homes' of 3 Cabinet Wives

Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Morgenthau Receive at the Carlton.

By Francesca McKenney.

Yesterday afternoon three of the Cabinet ladies held their last "at homes" of the season and members of Capital society braved the icy streets and cold blasts from the north to pay their respects.

Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, who received her guests in the patio of the Carlton Hotel, wore an afternoon gown of terra-cotta crepe embroidered with gold thread forming small gold squares, and a corsage of gardenias.

The dining room was decorated with palms and ferns and the large table had a beautiful centerpiece of a silver bowl massed with deep pink roses. The table was filled with delicious sandwiches, cakes and spun sugar baskets filled with candy. Tea and coffee were served from either end of the table.

Alternating at the tea table were Mrs. Wallace H. White, jr., who wore a gown of black crepe and a smart black velvet hat; Mrs. Joseph Robinson, Mrs. Key Pittman, who wore a gown of black crepe trimmed with a narrow collar of white crepe and a black hat; Mrs. Edward Costigan, who also wore black; Mrs. Herron Pearson, Mrs. Sam Reynolds, Mrs. Walter Chandler and Mrs. Bertrand Snell.

Mrs. Morgenthau Receives.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, who received her guests in the large drawing room on the second floor, wore an afternoon gown of almond green and gold lame fashioned on Grecian lines, with the fullness in the front and a small standing collar. Receiving with Mrs. Morgenthau was Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, wife of the retiring Undersecretary of the Treasury, who wore a charming frock of black velvet with a small black velvet hat trimmed with a black ostrich feather.

The drawing room was filled with vases of early spring flowers and pink roses, which were lovely against the ivory-panelled walls and pale jade brocaded draperies and the many handsome jade lamps. Many of the guests gathered around the large carved stone fireplace in the library to warm their hands and have a cigarette and relax for a moment in one of the large chintz-covered chairs. The dining room, which is done in pale green with a handsome mahogany dining room set and buffet, was lighted by many tall tapers in silver candlesticks. On the table was a silver bowl filled with dark-red tulips and yellow freesia. Tea and coffee were served from either end and many delicacies were on the table tempting the guests, as well as sherry on the buffet.

Alternating at the tea table were Mme. Bostrom, wife of the Minister of Sweden; Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General; Mrs. Stanley Reed, wife of the Solicitor General; Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Frank West, Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt and Miss Anne Squire.

Mrs. Borah Present.

Among those who were seen first at one tea and then at the other were Mrs. William E. Borah, wife of Senator Borah, who looked very smart in an ensemble of dark brown, trimmed with mink and a small brown hat to match, with a tiny nose veil. Mrs. Borah was accompanied by Mrs. Anderson and Miss Henrietta Young, of Boise, Idaho; Mr. and Mrs. Louis S. Owsley, the latter wearing a frock of black crepe with small black hat and black broadtail coat trimmed with collar and cuffs of sable, and Mrs. William Jennings Price, who wore a gown of black shot with gold and a dark red velvet ascot held in place by a diamond circle and an off-the-face black felt hat.

Others seen sipping a cup of tea were Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, who wore black with a turban of black velvet; Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, wife of the former Secretary of State; Mrs. William Phillips, wife of the Undersecretary of State, who wore a suit of hunter's green trimmed with Persian lamb and a small black felt hat; Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Hubbard, who were accompanied by their daughter, Mrs. George Morris; Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, who wore an ensemble of black and was accompanied by Miss Sinclair, of Baltimore, who also wore all black. Mrs. Sumner Welles, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, looked very handsome in dark brown with a mink coat and a small brown hat, and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, who wore a frock of a deep wine shade with a black hat and black accessories.

Also making the rounds were Miss Dorothy Tirrell, who wore a suit of black velvet with an ascot of light-blue velvet and a chic black velvet hat trimmed with feathers; Mr. George Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wales, Mrs. Charles Drayton, Col. and Mrs. Pratt and Mr. and Mrs. Cabot Coville, the latter was formerly Miss Lillian W. Grosvenor, who are spending some time in Washington. Mr. Coville is attached to the United States Embassy in Tokyo, Japan.

Soldiers Make Martial Setting for Reception by Mrs. Dern.

By Dudley Harmon.

Soldiers in khaki and officers in gold braid lent a martial air to the reception given yesterday by Mrs. George Dern, wife of the Secretary of War. The soldiers stood on each side of the steep driveway leading to Highwood, the Dern home in Chevy Chase, and directed traffic. Occasionally, when a car was stalled, they formed a platoon and with a mighty heave set it right again.

Inside, officers resplendent in uniforms announced the guests to Mrs. Dern, who received in the long drawing room. She wore a gown of black crepe, with net sleeves. Beside her stood Mrs. Harry Woodring, wife of the Assistant Secretary of War, wearing a gown of silver lame and a black hat.

Two Daughters Present.

Mrs. Harry Baxter and Miss Betsy Dern, daughters of Secretary and Mrs. Dern, stood in the drawing room and chatted with the guests. The former looked very handsome in a gown of black satin, trimmed at the neck with chartreuse, and Miss Dern wore an attractive frock of rose crepe.

As a uniformed detachment from the Army Band played softly in an upstairs balcony, guests wandered about the great hall of Highwood and stood talking in groups in the large dining room. The dining room table was decorated with a gay spring bouquet of jonquils and tulips. Wives of Army officers who took a turn at the tea table were Mrs. Frank M. Andrews, Mrs. William H. Tschappat, Mrs. Albert J. Bowley, Mrs. Edward Croft, Mrs. F. W. Coleman, Mrs. Arthur W. Brown, Mrs. Charles R. Reynolds, Mrs. George S. Simonds and Mrs. Claude E. Brigham.

It seemed as though all Army officers stationed in Washington and their wives called at some time during the afternoon. Among the hundreds from military ranks who left cards were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Herman Walter Schull, Gen. and Mrs. Claude Brigham, Gen. and Mrs. Wallace DeWitte—Gen. De Witte is in command at Walter Reed—Gen. and Mrs. Edward Shinkle, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. William Snow, Col. and Mrs. Henry T. Burgin, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas Ashburn, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Charles Moore Walson, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Burton Young Reed, Col. and Mrs. Frank Burnett and Col. and Mrs. Troupe Miller, who are in Washington en route from the West Coast from Fort Leavenworth.

The entertainment will be brief, brilliant and beautiful. Lisa Gardiner is in charge of the dancing; Flora McGill Keefer, the songs, and the floor committee will be a singing group entirely unusual in these modern days, and even the "bicycle built for two" will not pass unnoticed.

WAS IT MURDER?

By JAMES HILTON

Author of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" and "Lost Horizon."

Colin Revell, young writer, visits Oakington School to look into the mysterious deaths of the two Marshall brothers. Revell and Guthrie, Scotland Yard detective, suspect Ellington, cousin of the boys and heir to their fortune. Then one morning Lambourne, another master at the school, is found dead in bed. Robert Roseveare, headmaster, stresses the fact that Lambourne had a weak heart and probably died accidentally from an overdose of veronal. Mrs. Ellington tells Guthrie and Revell that Lambourne, who was fond of her, confessed he had murdered the boys to throw suspicion on her husband, whom he hated. They caution her not to mention this confession. They feel that Lambourne killed himself to escape a charge of double murder. Revell decides to stay on at the school as Roseveare's secretary.

CHAPTER XXII.

REVELL WAS SLIGHTLY annoyed and his annoyance centered upon Guthrie. It was unmannerly of the fellow, to say the least, to clear off without a word of explanation or thanks to one who had undoubtedly assisted him to the best of a perhaps more than average ability. Then an idea struck him; if he were going to stay on at Oakington for the rest of the term, he must first go back to his rooms and make arrangements with his landlady, pack a few extra things, and so on. Why not go that very afternoon and travel on the same train as the detective?

Thus it came about that the two of them met in a compartment of the 3:20 train to King's Cross. Guthrie seemed not in the least surprised, and welcomed Revell quite cordially. "Another deserter, eh, Revell? Given up the Oakington case as hopeless even to the amateur?"

"I'm staying on at Oakington till the end of term," Revell explained. "The head asked me to. But I'm just going back to pick up a few things."

"Oh, so you've taken the secretary's job, then? He told me he was going to ask you."

"I'm trying it till the end of the term, anyhow," replied Revell, cautiously.

"I'm glad we're to travel togther—it will save me writing you a very nice letter of thanks," said Guthrie.

"What I'd like as much as thanks," said Revell, "is to know a little bit more about what exactly hapened."

"Oh! The trouble is there's not much to explain, I'm afraid. Lambourne's confession closes the affair, of course. It's rather an annoying thing, to get a confession at second-hand. Legally, you see, it doesn't count."

"You mean that you can't even announce it to the public?"

"Advisable not to—so they tell me at headquarters. Can't be proved, you see. Some relative of Lamburne's, if he has any, might up and sue me for slandering the family name."

"So the Oakington murders will go down into history as unsolved crimes?"

"If they go down to history at all, I suppose they will. Of course, I've had to tell my superiors the truth about it. But nobody else. And I should advise you not to, either."

"Haven't you told Roseveare?"

"No. Why should I? Let the poor man stick to his theory—it's less unpleasant for the school's reputation, and that's all he cares about."

"Yet you think it was suicide?"

Guthrie Gives Opinion.

"I'm positive of it. Suicide to escape a murder charge. You know, Revell, behind all the sentimental stuff, there isn't very much to be said for the coward. And Lambourne, I'm afraid, was one—utterly. During the war, for instance. Oh yes, I know he was shell-shocked—and I'm not talking of anything he did after that—it may have been excusable then, but it wasn't before. Anyhow, he narrowly escaped a court-martial death sentence."

"For cowardice?"

"Yes. It's on the record."

"Would you have got him, do you think, if he hadn't confessed?"

Guthrie smiled. "That's tempting me, isn't it? To be perfectly frank, I don't know. His brains were so much better than his nerves. . . . Ah, well, if the Oakington affair's done nothing else, it's made us acquainted—maybe we shall meet again some day."

"I hope so," answered Revell sincerely enough.

Four hours later, having done all he wished, Revell was again at the station on his way back to Oakington. He was glad to be back. He realised it as he stepped out of the train at Oakington station; the sham Gothic towers and buttresses no longer repelled as formerly, but lured with a sinister fascination that grew as he walked along the lane toward them. Two boys—two brothers—had been killed within those grotesque precincts. The murderer had then killed himself. Yet somehow, instead of the apathy that usually follows the final closure of an unsavory incident, Revell was conscious of a widening and deepening interest in the whole affair. It was closed, finished, wound up—yet he was still a little curious; there were still things that he wanted to know about it.

That evening the Head talked to him of the harm that the affair had done to the school's reputation. Revell sincerely sympathized; Roseveare, as always, exercised a queer personal fascination over him. "It's been pretty awful, I know," he said, "but it's over and done with now, and people soon forget." (He did not really think so, but it was the thing to say.)

Roseveare Sees Reporters.

"They never forget a name," Roseveare answered. "Long after I am dead—perhaps long after you are dead—people will still say, when they hear Oakington mentioned—'Why, isn't that the school where those two boys were killed?' A deplorable state of affairs, but now, perhaps, we may feel that the worst is over, and may begin the task of restoration. And the first step, since this terrible chapter of mysteries has been left unsolved by the authorities, is to establish some basis of hypothesis on which the matter may conveniently be discarded. It was with this in mind that this afternoon, while you were away, I allowed myself to be interviewed by a group of newspaper men."

The next morning, therefore, in common with some millions of others throughout the United Kingdom, Revell was able to read "the first authentic interview with the Headmaster of Oakington." It was amusing to learn that "Dr. Roseveare is a tall, handsome man with a charming smile and a quiet, forceful personality. He greeted our representative most affably, and begged to be excused for not having received him before. 'I felt,' he explained, 'that while the case was as it was, it had better not be discussed. Now, however, that circumstances have altered, I am glad to be able to make a statement.

"'First,'" continued the statement, "'I think I may tell you definitely that the police have retired from the case. They have discontinued the quest for the murderer, which they would hardly do if they still believed he existed. I conclude, then, that they do not now believe that any murder was committed at all.

"'The first death—that of poor Robert Marshall—was, I think, undoubtedly an accident. The second of the unfortunate brothers—Wilbraham—was shot, it is true, but no substantial evidence has appeared to point to any person as the assailant. The only conclusion to be reached, then, is that he died by his own hand.

Murder Theory Scouted.

"'Perhaps I ought to add that the tragic death of Mr. Lambourne, one of the school staff, appears to have been quite unconnected with the other events. Mr. Lambourne, as I said at the inquest, was a peculiar unhappy victim of the war, and had been in a poor state of health for many years. The jury rightly returned an open verdict, but my private opinion, for what it is worth, is that the overdose of veronal which caused his death was taken accidentally and not at all with suicidal intent.

"'That, gentlemen, is really all I have to say. We at Oakington will try to forget these terrible days as soon as possible and will strive to do our duty in the future as nobly as we have done in the past.'"

As Revell read he could almost hear the suave, well-chosen words spoken in the calm, soothing voice of the Head himself. At breakfast he congratulated Roseveare wholeheartedly on the statement and expressed the belief that it would help a great deal toward the closing of the whole affair. Yes, the affair was closed . . . and yet . . . and yet in some strange and secret way he could not let it be closed in his own thoughts.

Simple Aids Help Glorify Milady's Hair

New Brilliantine, Shampoo and Tonic Offer Quality at Reasonable Price.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

IT SO happened once upon a time that somebody, somewhere, called a woman's hair her crowning glory. Ever since then, and particularly during the last few years, chemists and hairdressers have been doing all they could to see that hair was just that. And how remarkably they have succeeded!

Take for instance the three simple preparations made by one of our leading beauty houses. There's a brilliantine, a liquid shampoo and a tonic. They are not expensive, and they do represent quality. They can be used with perfect assurance that they will glorify the hair.

The brilliantine is a clean smelling lotion. You sprinkle a few drops on the palm of your hand and rub gently over your hair. You'll find it does two things—gives a wonderful sheen and keeps the hair in place. And doesn't make it oily and greasy.

The shampoo is one of those that is truly a delight to use. A scant three tablepoonsful will simply smother your head in lather. And what a lather! It's creamy and soft and the cleanest feeling thing ever.

The tonic is an excellent antiseptic, mild and effective. It banishes the pernicious little germs that prey on your scalp and make the skin scaly and itchy. It promotes circulation so that the blood is brought close to the roots of the hair where it can nourish them. As a result, hair becomes stronger and healthier.

Tuxedos and Cutaways For Rent.

THE gentleman who finds that his tuxedo or cutaway is looking sadly the worse for wear and can't last the season out, ought to be glad to hear about a certain tailor who has a sideline of renting suits. Maybe Tom, or Dick, or Harry doesn't feel financially able to buy a new tux or cutaway at the present time. Maybe he can afford it, but had rather wait until next fall. Well, there's no reason why he should miss a single party, for here's a tailor who can fit him easily and whose rates are amazingly low.

Balbriggans for Comfort.

SPRING may be around the corner, but there it's going to stay for many a week yet. Winter has gone on a rampage and isn't thinking about retiring without an extra freeze or two or three. So—balbriggans are well in the picture. You can always sleep snugly and warmly in them.

One large local store is showing some especially attractive ones with wide, full trousers, loose or ski style, sleeves long or short.

They come in sizes 16 and 17, in pastels or rich, dark colors. The price—a paltry 84 cents.

Gardenia Bath Scent.

YOU CAN'T imagine how luxurious even an ordinary bath becomes when its fragrant with the scent of gardenias. You can't imagine how dainty and alluring you become when you have perfumed your skin with gardenia cologne!

If only you did imagine you'd wait no longer to take advantage of the extraordinary offer made by a downtown store. Here you can buy a 50-cent bottle of gardenia bath oil, also a $1 bottle of gardenia eau de cologne—both for $1!

Don't put off your buying because the quantity of this merchandise is, sad to say, limited.

Valentine Gadgets.

YOU NEVER saw the like! Honest to goodness there are hundreds of millions of trillions (that's your first impression) of the most fascinating valentine gadgets selling now in a downtown store. There's a selection of nut and candy cups and place cards that makes you dizzy. Fringed lanterns, centerpieces, and what not. And about these centerpieces. They're more fun! Each one is filled (like the King's pie!) with surprising odds and ends.

English Professor Wages Lone Fight For Sartorial Color

In an effort to overcome the "indecent shyness" of Englishmen, Prof. Henry E. Armstrong, Fellow of the Royal Society in London, is going in for rainbow sartorial effects.

"You cannot persuade men in these days to wear color," he complained. "In other days, they gloried in color, in velvet and lace, and the effects were charming. Modern costumes are not charmnig."

White bearded, 87-year-old Prof. Armstrong has said: "I want to do everything that everybody else does not do."

He has partially succeeded, for he turned up at a dinner of the Working Men's College in London wearing a magenta waistcoat with one blue lapel and one mauve.

"All my waistcoats are topical, and about each one I can tell a story," he said. "This one was designed by myself in memory of a great chemist who was once my teacher and who invented the aniline dyes used in making the waistcoat."

Says All Women Have Right to Work

Dr. Mary Woolley Defends Right Of Women to Choose Own Work

Noted Educator Reviews Change in College Girls' Courses and Increasing Interest in International Affairs; Peace Movement Called "Enlightened Selfishness."

By Hope Ridings Miller.

DR. MARY EMMA WOOLLEY, president of Mount Holyoke College, fittingly exemplifies the simplicity of greatness.

She has a string of degrees that would make anyone sit up and take notice; yet she's as easy to talk to as your next door neighbor. Her name frequently appears on lists of the feminine great. She has won international recognition as an educator and as the first woman delegate to represent the United States at the Geneva disarmament conferences; yet she will discuss everything from world peace to the position of women in terms a child could understand.

She did, yesterday. A few minutes before she attended the morning session of the national board of the American Association of University Women, this affable, sturdy woman, with more than three-score and ten years to her credit, sat in a clubroom at A. A. U. W. headquarters and quietly expressed her opinion about "a number of things."

She believes "every woman, married or single, rich or poor, has a right to work. That is her privilege as a human being; her right as an individual. No person—man or woman—should be deprived of his choice as to how he shall live."

In her role as college president, Dr. Woolley has observed, "women finishing college today generally feel they have some special contribution to make to the world. They should be given every chance to make that contribution."

Discussing courses most popular with modern college girls, Dr. Woolley pointed out, "There is an increasing interest today in economics, sociology, English literature and drama, history and political science. Enrollment in mathematics is smaller than ever. The classics are also losing favor."

She also pointed out there is, among women students, a keen interest in international affairs, particularly as they affect world peace. This brought the conversation around to a subject in which Dr. Woolley herself is vitally interested.

She believes, however, that the problem of how to achieve world peace should concern women no more than men. "It challenges one sex as much as the other. But if women, presenting a united front, moved toward the goal of a world without war they could eventually achieve it, but how much more quickly and easily they could attain it with the cooperation of men.

She conceives of a world-wide peace movement as being nothing more or less than "enlightened selfishness." Collective security, she thinks, is the only hope of a closely-knit world. And while she sees no reason that his should be of more concern to women than men, she believes "Women can do a great deal more than they have done, to bring about peace."

In this connection she advises women to use their influence with Congressmen more than they have in the past, "to let legislators know how they stand on neutrality and disarmament," and to help push the people's mandate, which seeks to get 50,000,000 signatures of persons not in favor of further armament appropriations.

Still enthusiastic about the League of Nations, Dr. Woolley is convinced that body stands, as no other, for collective security and will, if it ever wins the support of all strong nations, cause the cry, "on to the battlefield!" to be permanently exchanged for "on to the conference table."

In conclusion, Dr. Woolley averred, "The settlement of disputes between nations by armed conflict, international disputes by armed conflict is primitive, inhumane. In keeping with modern progress, we must substitute mediation for war."

Easily Cooked Pie Ideal After A Heavy Meal

THE most intriguing desserts are not always those that are difficult to prepare. Here is one that can be mixed in a jiffy, especially if you have an extra unfilled pie shell on hand.

You will like this dessert, too, for its light, refreshing quality. It is not nearly as filling as the usual pie and it can be served with success after a heavy meal. The recipe follows

Golden Apricot Pie.

½ pound dried apricots, cooked and drained
4 tablespoons sugar
1 package orange flavored gelatin
1 pint war apricot juice and water
¼ teaspoon salt
1 baked 9-inch pie shell
½ cup cream, whipped

Combine apricots and sugar. Dissolve gelatin in warm juice and water. Add salt and pour over apricots. Chill. When slightly thickened turn into cold pie shell. Chill until firm. Cover with whipped cream.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"OUR living room looks like a barn in spite of everything," said a lady who delights in beautiful colors. So we took a look and made our diagnosis. The room has exquisite soft aquamarine walls, a cedar carpet, a deep rosy beige sofa, one green chair and two chairs in flowered chintz on an ivory ground. The draperies were of this same chintz over cream glass curtains. A lovely room—almost. Just what did it lack anyway?

The answer was pictures. The walls were bare as bare. We suggested a reproduction of a portrait by one of the eighteenth century French painters—or by an English master, then perhaps a series of flower pictures. The walls might also be broken by an interesting wall hanging and by a set of hanging shelves with bright little porcelain figurines on them. Another way to give design to the walls would be to have a row of unusual pottery plates hung vertically or horizontally.

Women Advised Against Assuming Deceptive Air of Helplessness.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I have followed with interest the discussion arising from a letter signed "Unpopular," published in your column January 27. The idea advanced by "Eve" in your column of February 3, namely, for women to clothe themselves with weaknesses and virtues they do not possess is in my opinion one of the chief causes of unhappy marriage, leading to unhappier divorce. Such a technique belongs to the Victorian era and not to the present day, when girls are out in the business world learning to face facts and take life on the chin

One of the finest men it has been my good fortune to know once confided to me that his wife changed completely from the minute the marriage service was read, and although he never admitted it, I know his whole life was ruined as a consequence of such subtle cheating.

• • • •

I have never had the nerve to go alone to dances, but I have always been known as an "independent little cuss." That independence is dear to me and I have kept it unblemished. When I finally met the man who liked me for what I really am the greatest gift which can come to any of us was ours, to wit: happy married companionship built on a solid foundation of honesty and truth.

"Eve" failed to mention whether the divorcee who captured a second husband by looking appealing to men for economic security, succeeded in making that second marriage a success for herself and the man who rescued her from her penniless plight. Marriage at any price, alas, is too often the motto of the clinging vine.

• • • •

The more I think about it, the more I am convinced that men need to be educated in the matter of choosing a wife. Were I a member of the opposite sex, wanting to make a happy marriage, I should be careful to avoid the popular girl; just as the woman seeking happiness in marriage should avoid choosing a good looking, conceited man for a husband. Some day, perhaps, we may use the intelligence Providence gave us and learn to look beneath the surface in choosing a mate. When that day dawns, the clinging vine will hook only the type of man who really prefers the clinging vine, and the man who needs, instead, a woman who will stand shoulder to shoulder with him will not be taken in by false labels.

• • • •

Constantly we are being told that unhappy marriages come from a woman's being too possessive, from making unreasonable demands upon a man's time and freedom of action after marriage. Well, what else can a man expect from a leech? A woman who has never developed the ability to stand on her own two feet before marriage is not going to be miraculously and instantly endowed with that virtue through the words of a marriage service. It behooves women, as mothers of the race, to build up in their sons' minds a healthy appreciation of the girl who has the courage to be herself; to teach them not to select a wife by wholly superficial standards.

• • • •

In these controversial times it is constantly impressed on my mind that women are not so immovably conservative as men and I believe this is a fact to be thankful for. The best advice to give our girls is to be true to their highest ideals at all times; but never to be fettered by rulings laid down by a few ultra-conservatives concerning what is hypothetically correct or incorrect conduct; particularly when the questions involved are trivial. Sincerely, RACHEL.

• • • •

"Eve's" Message Misconstrued.

DEAR RACHEL: Yours is an excellent letter, but I believe you misunderstood "Eve's" message if you suppose she was suggesting that women assume a deceptive air of helplessness in order to win the protection of men. What she said was: "It is the woman who possesses a certain fundamental helplessness—not an assumed helplessness—who gets the attention of some man who senses an opportunity for exercising his masculine protectiveness." Your theorizing is fundamentally sound, and can be read with profit by all women who are interested in achieving happy marriage. M. H.

'Healthy' Grouch Good for Health, Official Asserts

SEATTLE. — A good laugh a day may keep the doctor away, but a "healthy" grouch is good for the health, too.

At least, that's the opinion of Dr. Frank M. Carroll, city health commissioner, who argues nothing aids the nervous system more than "a good mad."

Dr. Carroll, however, partially agreed with Dr. James J Walsh, of Fordham School of Sociology, who told a Bridgeport, Conn., audience recently that laughter was good for innumerable body ailments.

"There are times," Dr. Carroll said, "when a grouch does more to clear up worries than laughter. I am inclined to believe that laughter is a sign of good health rather than an aid to good health."

Fatty Tumors Not Harmful In Most Cases

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

WHENEVER the word "tumor" is mentioned conversation is likely to be conducted in a hushed voice. To almost every one the name implies cancer. This assumption is wholly unwarranted, as there are many varieties of tumors that are benign (not cancerous).

Although almost any sort of swelling may be called a tumor, the term nowadays is applied only to overgrowths of tissues, the cause of which is not positively known. Somewhere along the line there must exist an irritation bringing on an excessive increase in the number of cells.

We should recall that the two types of tumors—malignant and benign—have this habit. The malignant group, however, may spread throughout the body, sapping vitality and even destroying life. The benign affair grows where it is. It does not spread, but may cause difficulty because of its size and the pressure it may exert. Only rarely will it disintegrate or manifest cancerous tendencies.

Fatty Tumors Common.

Of the several forms of benign growths, lipomata or fatty tumors are quite common. Deposits of fat in a particular locality lead to the formation of round or oval masses. They may be found in almost any part of the body, but develop frequently beneath the skin. Now and then several masses are grouped together, and if they increase in size they may interfere mechanically with various functions of the body.

In size they vary from tiny pealike bodies to lumps weighing many pounds. Fifty-pound growths have been reported. The latter are often difficult to carry about and constitute a drag on the muscular system of the body. They serve no useful purpose whatever. When viewed under the microscope they appear as large collections of fat globules held in position by strands of fibrous tissue. When large they demand and receive an ample supply of blood and, because of the generous amount of nutrition offered to them, may continue to grow.

Seldom Painful.

Most of these unsightly lumps occur on the back, neck, shoulders, and the abdominal wall. Sometimes they are found in the joints or in the fat deposited around the knees or hips. In these situations they are easily removed, but when they grow in the kidneys or other vital organs they represent a real problem. They are seldom painful unless their very size causes pressure upon a nerve filament or, as is occasionally the case, when the growth itself is connected with a nerve.

These tumors may be confused with what is known as adiposa dolorosa or Dercum's disease, which is characterized by symmetrical deposits of fat in various parts of the body. This condition is accompanied by pain, general debility and psychic disturbances, and is found more frequently in women than in men. For the most part the fatty masses involve the abdomen and the extremities; the face is usually spared.

Operation Easy.

If small, fatty lipomata give no trouble they may be let alone. However, if they are subject to irritation, spoil one's looks, or interfere with body movements because of their size, it is well to remove them surgically. A local anesthetic only will be required in most instances. Now and then a tumor on the back of the neck, the scalp, or between the shoulders will produce an apparent deformity. Inasmuch as the operation is easy and attended with very little danger in the hands of a skilled surgeon these growth may be regarded with complacency.

Mrs. Landon's Hospitality Rivals Her Husband as Magnet for Guests.

By Pattie Ellicott.

THE WORDS of the psalmist, "She lookest well to the ways of her household and eateth not the bread of idleness," might well have been written of Mrs. Alfred M. Landon, wife of the Governor of Kansas, potential candidate for the Republican nomination for President.

MRS. LANDON.

Mrs. Landon is an excellent homemaker and cares most for her home, her children and her determination to make a happy home for her busy husband. Those who have been guests at their comfortable home in Kansas and have shared their hospitality at table united in proclaiming Mrs. Landon's domestic virtues.

If the wheel of political fortune should stop at the Landon Presidential number, it is safe to predict that home cooking will prevail in the White House menage and that the First Lady of the Land will waste no time in trying out those marvelous new electric stoves, ovens and other culinary gadgets which have been installed in the renovated kitchen of the Executive Mansion.

The Landon family always rejoice when the mistress of the home includes eggplant timbales on the day's menu. Through happy experience they know that it is a dish fit for a king—or a future President.

One advantage of eggplant is that it is an all-season-round vegetable and it can be used to vary an otherwise monotonous winter diet in some cases.

In making eggplant timbales an eggplant should be pared and cut in ¼-inch slices. Cook it in boiling, salted water until soft. Then drain thoroughly and add ½ cup butter, ½ cup soft, stale bread crumbs, 2 eggs well beaten, a few drops onion juice, salt and pepper. Then line small buttered molds with a can of pimientos. Fill with this mixture, sprinkle with buttered crumbs, and bake 15 minutes in moderately hot oven (375 F.) Remove from molds and garnish with parsley. Eggplant mixture may be baked in baking dish.

On The Air Today

IF you are among WJSV's audience at 12:15 today, you may some time say to your friends, "I heard her the first time she ever sang publicly."

For superlative heights in the music world are predicted by WJSV executives for Grace Vitality. The events leading to Grace's first appearance today form a fairy tale of a modern day. When WJSV took microphones to several schools and hospitals in the interests of the President's Ball, the Weightman School, for children suffering the aftereffects of infantile paralysis, was included.

Grace is a pupil at the school. And she sang on one of the programs. Her voice thrilled the station staff, hardened to amateurs and job-seekers. Grace sang because she loves to sing. There is no piano in her home. In fact she never has had the opportunity to sing with instrumental accompaniment. But her voice, untrained and unfinished, is true of tone, broad of range and even one who does not thoroughly understand the qualities forming a beautiful voice readily appreciates the natural beauty in Grace's singing.

Listen to her today. And consider that Grace is 16 years old, that she has had no opportunities to study. Not even the advantages of singing to instrumental accompaniment. And then visualize what can, and will, be done with her endowments by skilled instructors.

Another champion of Alexander Woollcott has come forward. Julian S. Cate has written this desk in much the same vein as Frank Ford Burnet.

All concerned with the departure of Mr. Woollcott from the airways, whether agreeing or disagreeing with his sponsor, will view this statement of Boake Carter's sponsor with interest. It is given in part:

Philco believes in freedom of speech on the air. The American public is entitled to uncensored expression of opinion, so that it may use its own judgment and draw its own conclusions. Philco has taken time on the air for daily comment on current events by Boake Carter, but Philco has never exercised nor will exercise any censorship over him whatsoever. * * * Carter will continue to be the sole judge as to what he shall say and how he shall say it. The comments and opinions expressed by him on the air are his and his alone. Philco respects the disinterestedness of Carter's comments. * * * Philco officials themselves are not always in complete accord with Carter's views. Even in such cases they studiously avoid any attempt to coerce him in their way of thinking.

The Philco release follows by some two weeks a letter sent to radio desks with a set of questions attached relating to the matter of freedom of expression on the air. Perhaps an assumption can be drawn that the Philco statement above has been prepared after a study of replies received to the questionnaire. In which event it would appear that the radio editorial opinion collectively is that radio observers and commentators should be free of censorship.

No Trump Technique.

It is a fact, generally known only to experts, that no trump contracts are easier to "steal" than suit contracts. One reason is that the defenders have more difficulty visualizing their best line of defense. Many other reasons exist that would require to much explanation for this column.

The declarer in today's hand was fully cognizant of his opportunity and took advantage of it.

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 heart | Pass | 1 no trump | Pass |
| 2 hearts | Pass | 2 no trump | Pass |
| 3 no trump [final bid] | | | |

North's three no trump bid was optimistic, but not bad, since he was not vulnerable.

West opened his four of spades and the jack was played from dummy. A small club to the king was the next play, and then a heart to the king. Another small club, away from the queen, was passed by East and won by South's jack. With two clubs home, declarer now took an abrupt tack in his course; he went after the heart suit. To maintain communications he led a heart and ducked. West made a desperation shift to the small diamond. Dummy played low and East's king fell to the ace. Realizing that he had to establish one more trick for game, declarer boldly led up to the spade king. West cashed his two good diamonds, but was helpless. He took the ace and his partner's long diamond suit was blocked and West could not reach it.

Had East jumped up with the ace of clubs on the first or second lead and returned a spade, declarer could not have won more than eight tricks. West's spades would have been established before North's hearts.

London Meat Strike Reported Nearing End

London, Feb. 5 (AP).—An unofficial report spread here tonight that the meat strike at the Smithfield Central Market would end late Saturday with men returning to work between 11 p. m. and midnight.

Strikers, however, showed no signs of relenting and claimed all of the city's dock, wharf and cold storage workers will join with them unless Smithfield employers yield to their demands for increased wages.

The employers declared in a statement they "can not and will not yield" to the demands.

Convoys of trucks continued to carry meat supplies from cold storage depots set up secretly and hotels, restaurants and housewives were still unaffected by the walkout.

The Judge knows—the Attorneys are discovering why no other whiskey can be as mellow as Four Roses

IF YOU NOTICE whiskey labels, you know there are three different kinds of whiskey to choose from: straight whiskey that's unblended; whiskey blended with neutral spirits; and a blend of straight whiskies and nothing but straight whiskies.

Which is best? It's our own sincere conviction—based on 70 years' experience in producing top-quality American whiskies—that the finest whiskey of all is an expert blend of all straight, all American whiskies—every drop made in the United States. In other words, that the finest whiskey of all is Four Roses!

There are two easy ways to prove this. First, by taste. Just try Four Roses and we believe you'll agree that there's never been a whiskey that could match it for mellow flavor, for throat-caressing smoothness.

Second, logic proves that your palate is right. Every straight whiskey—even the very finest—has its own special characteristic—something extra in bouquet, or body, or flavor. By blending several fine straight whiskies the way we've learned how to blend them, we get a whiskey mellower, more noble than any of the separate whiskies could be alone. We combine in Four Roses all the virtues a whiskey-lover seeks.

This is not news to old-timers. And it's no longer news to a lot of other men . . . that the best whiskey is a blend of all straight, all American whiskies . . . and its name is Four Roses!

Four Roses — IT'S A PERFECT BLEND — OF ALL STRAIGHT — ALL AMERICAN WHISKIES

Anti-Red Bill Protests Read Before Board

Patriotism of School Officials Praised in Report.

Letters from three parents' organizations protesting against the "anti-Communism" rider to the District Appropriations bill that forbids all mention of Communism in District schools, were read at the meeting of the Board of Education yesterday.

In a letter adopted January 30 and sent to the board this week, the Burleith Citizens Association demanded repeal of the rider, charging that anti-Red agitation "has been entirely uncalled for and probably furthered because of certain personalities."

Resolutions of confidence in the "patriotism" of the members of the board were transmitted by both the Francis Scott Key Parent-Teacher Association and the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights.

The Citizens Forum also went on record as opposed to any Congressional investigation of local schools to determine whether or not pro-Soviet books or periodicals are being used.

Periodicals Found Pure.

At the meeting, the specially appointed committee to investigate periodicals in use in schools, submitted a report on te journals in the vocational schools. As revealed in The Washington Post on Tuesday, none of the periodicals were found to be tainted with "communistic leanings," although the committee discouraged the use of five magazines as "too advanced" or "unsuited for technical training."

A "white" list of 13 juvenile magazines was also submitted by the committee. Seven juvenile magazines were not recommended by the committee because they were "unsuited for school use," but none because of "subversive" influence.

In presenting the two reports, Dr. Ballou, superintendent of schools, said that more than 3,000 magazines were yet to be considered by the committee and that reports would be issued as the members completed their consideration of each magazine.

Student Gain Noted.

The number of new junior and senior high and vocational school students entering District schools this February was almost twice the number graduated in January, Superintendent Ballou announced yesterday.

Two thousand seven hundred eighteen were graduated and 5,139 new students were admitted, for a net increase of 2,421.

A further increase of almost 30 per cent in the enrollment of junior and senior high school students by 1942 was forecast in the last two of a series of eight fact-finding reports prepared by Dr. Ballou for the proposed five-year school-building program and presented to the board yesterday.

The reports, estimating the future enrollments in the junior and senior high shools for the next five years, indicated that by 1942 the present junior high school register will have been swelled from 20,402 to 27,207, and the senior high school enrollment from 12,238 to 21,335.

Among the "complaints" that will be presented to the Board of Education at a mass meeting on Friday wil lbe a demand from the Parent-Teacher Association for adequate heating at John Eaton School. Mothers who early this week refused to allow their children to remain in school because of cold rooms and who had threatened to carry their protest to the meeting of the board were appeased by the warmer weather yesterday and permitted their children to return to school.

Five-Year Estimate.

Ballou's estimate of future junior high school enrollment for the next five years, as compared with the current year, follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| 1936-37 (current) | 21,894 |
| 1937-38 | 23,132 |
| 1938-39 | 24,649 |
| 1939-40 | 26,070 |
| 1940-41 | 26,988 |
| 1941-42 | 27,207 |
| High school enrollment: | |
| 1936-37 (current) | 12,170 |
| 1937-38 | 12,820 |
| 1938-39 | 13,406 |
| 1939-40 | 30,041 |
| 1940-41 | 30,716 |

More Children Out of Schools Due to Need

Sharp Increase Reported; Charitable Agencies Given Names.

Eighty per cent more children were forced to stay home from school because of a lack of clothing during the week ended January 17 than during the same period last year, Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou reported yesterday to the Board of Education.

Where in 1935 during the week of January 12-17 scanty clothing prevented 230 children from coming to school, this year there were 417 such stay-at-homes, totaling 1,795 days of absence, an average of more than four absences per child for the single week.

The names of these needy children have been referred to charitable agencies, Dr. Ballou told board members. That several hundred of these children still lack sufficient clothing, however, was indicated from the fact that the Student-Aid of the District Parent-Teacher Association, leaders in providing clothing for school children, were able to care for only 230 students during January.

From the beginning of September until the end of January, roughly 1,000 children were clothed by the Student-Aid, Mrs. E. J. Dowling, chairman of the Student-Aid, said yesterday. This number compares with 850 children clothed during the same period a year ago.

The sharp cold this January, as contrasted with the milder winter last year, was offered as a partial explanation for the drastic increase in the number of children needing clothing. School relief investigators reported, however, that, despite an increase in the nominal wages being paid those on relief, a number of families were finding it more difficult to get along this winter.

Chauffeurs Tonight Quit Cars for Ball

The chauffeurs of the city's limousine owners will have tonight off—they will attend the annual ball of the Chauffeurs Benevolent Association at the Raleigh Hotel.

Although there is also to be a White House reception, most of the city's limousine owner have given their chauffeurs time to attend the ball, which is for the benefit of the sick and unemployed of the association.

Sizoo to Speak.

Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will speak before the Congressional Club tomorrow afternoon in the club house. His subject will be "England As I Saw It."

Fire Department Bells May Toll 'No School'

Whether a modern Paul Revere would do better to use the radio or the Fire Department was debated yesterday by members of the Board of Education.

The question was raised by Mrs. Mary A. McNeill, who suggested that on extremely cold days an announcement that school is closed be broadcast throughout the city.

Both Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou and Mrs. Henry G. Doyle, president of the board, pointed out that not all families have radios and that in old-time Boston the fire department was used for that purpose with considerable success.

The debate was left unsettled when Dr. Ballou was ordered to investigate and report on the feasibility of closing schools in severe weather by the next meeting.

Rally Is Urged To Solve City's Traffic Tie-up

Proposals for a civic rally to discuss Washington's traffic problems were advanced last night at a meeting of the Keystone Automobile Club advisory board.

Chairman Carpenter, of the House committee investigating the causes of accidents here, suggested a joint meeting of the Keystone Club, the American Automobile Association, the Board of Trade and the Federation of Citizens' Associations.

The committee, Carpenter explained, hopes to discover and cure the "sore spot" of the local traffic situation. He cautioned the club not to expect Congress to "eliminate traffic or find a parking space for everyone."

Representative Chauncey W. Reed, Illinois, another committee member, said he would like to see more policemen assigned to directing traffic and fewer officers detailed to special functions.

A third traffic committeeman, Representative William T. Schulte, Illinois, declared police should give special attention to the speed of street cars. Trolleys figured in five fatal accidents last month.

He added more policemen should patrol the streets under the direct supervision of precinct commanders. Every captain, he said, should be held responsible for conditions in his precinct.

Schuldt Gains Support of Bar To Keep Bench

All Answering Query Favor Incumbent; Citizens Praise Jurist.

Presiding Judge Gus Adolph Schuldt of Police Court appeared as the choice of the District Bar Association to succeed himself on the bench as replies began to come in to a circular letter sent by the association to its 1,100 members.

The organizatoin has asked Washington lawyers for the second time since 1925 to suggest their candidates for a vacancy on a local bench. All replies have to be in by Friday, when the association's board decides whether to act.

If the returns show a wide enough interest, an officer said last night, a special meeting of the organization will be called to approve a recommendation to Attorney General Homer Cummings.

As business, women and civic organizations throughout the city have thrown their support behind Schuldt, it was rumored he would not be reappointed because he is a Republican.

The District Federation of Women's Clubs, the North Capitol, Kalorama, Columbia Heights, Mount Pleasant, Brightwood and numerous other citizens' association have already adopted resolutions indorsing Schuldt.

Business and civic leaders have echoed the same opinion voiced last night by Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, when he said:

"Good man, Judge Schuldt. He is capable, conscientious and his record of service in behalf of the District has been a long and fine one. Besides that he is a Washington man, and that is important. He certainly should be reappointed."

The judge yesterday spiked rumors that he was going to retire, saying that he was definitely a candidate for reappointment. There is no retirement requirements for the District judges.

Fifty-eight years old last month, Schuldt was born in Washington the son of Prof. Henry Schuldt, a music teacher. His service in the District began at the turn of the century, when he worked as a clerk in the corporation counsel's office while obtaining his law degree from National University.

Except for a few years as a newspaper correspondent, he has been connected with that office and on the bench ever since. He was made a Police Court judge in 1923.

Aims of Negro Parley Told at Mass Meeting

A mass meeting under auspices of the National Negro Congress, which opens next week in Chicago, was addressed last night by Benjamin C. Marsh, executive secretary of the People's Lobby; Dean Lucy D. Slowe, of Howard University, and Dr. W. H. Jernagin, pastor of the Mount Carmel Baptist Church.

D. C. Better UnderRepeal, Dirksen Says

Figures on Drunkenness Challenged in House Controversy.

Two Organizations Cited as Behind Prohibition Measure.

The organized drys in Washington were charged with bringing pressure upon members of Congress in an effort to obtain passage of the Guyer prohibition bill for the District by Representative Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, on the House floor today.

Dirksen, ranking minority member of the House District Committee, also challenged the figures and statements of Representative Guyer (Republican), Kansas, and the drys relative to the amount of drinking and drunkenness in the National Capital since repeal.

Before he had finished, Guyer and Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, asserted that they had seen more drunkenness in Washington since repeal than during prohibition. Representative Maverick (Democrat), Texas, replied that Blanton got his figures on the streets, "while some of the more practical ones may have got them from bootlegging joints."

Tipsy Arrests Decline.

Dirksen said arrests for drunkenness, particularly among young people, declined in 1935 after the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board administration was adjusted.

Explaining that he had received many letters asking that he support the Guyer bill, he said:

"I wondered somewhat about the nation-wide interest in the Guyer bill, so I made a little examination and found that the united dry forces of Washington were behind it and that the Women's National Christian Temperance Union favored the measure."

He said he also learned that a dry journal, Union Signal, was being circulated with quotations from a speech made by Guyer on the House floor, July 9, 1935.

While praising Guyer for his sincerity, Dirksen challenged his statement that "there are practically 2,000 licensed saloons in Washington and some assert there are from 5,000 to 10,000 illicit places where liquors are sold, all of which are immoral in their influence."

A. B. C. Efforts Praised.

After explaining how the A. B. C. Board dicenses various liquor dealers, Dirksen said there are 293 Class C licensees, which Guyer labeled saloons.

Praising the work of the A. B. C. Board, Dirksen asserted that "arrests for intoxication are gradually diminishing" and the arrests of young persons, from 17 to 21, for intoxication in 1935 was 306, "which is the lowest in five years."

Norton Requested To Study Rent Law

Representative Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, yesterday was asked by the executive committee of the Washington Central Labor Union committee on rents and low-cost housing to call for consideration the Ellenbogen bill which would establish a rent commission here.

The union named a committee to confer with John Ihlder, director of the Washington Alley Dwelling Authority. Those named were Wilbur Cohen, Milton Lowenthal, Robert Sentman, Dan Kessler, Sam Bernstein, Dorothy Cline and Louis Tuckman.

The legislative committee, composed of Catherine Bauer, Walter Disbrow, Ernest Shipley, Harry Dheler and Henry Rhine, was instructed to call upon Mrs. Norton to protest against her waiver of the right to introduce the Ellenbogen bill in the House.

Inquest on 16th Death In Traffic Due Today

An inquest will be held at the District Morgue today when a coroner's jury investigates the traffic death of Bartholomew Barry, 72, of 53 K street northeast, Washington's sixteenth automobile death this year.

Barry died from a fractured skull in Casualty Hospital Monday after being struck at First and H streets northeast January 16. Ellsworth Reigher, of Baltimore County, Md., who police said was the driver of the car that struck Barry, was charged with reckless driving and released on bond.

Miss Thompson Offers Plan to Fight Fascism

MR. AND MRS. SINCLAIR LEWIS.

Declares Land Must be Returned to Farmers to 'Free' Them.

Americans need to be shown the way back to the original American dream, a nation of free men, Dorothy Thompson (Mrs. Sinclair Lewis) said yesterday.

If this country wishes to avoid being led into Fascism, Miss Thompson believes the land must be put back into the hands of those who live upon it.

This, she told her interviewer, means the recalling to the American people the original American dream, "which was not of a country teeming with luxuries in the form of consumers' goods, but which was of a country of free men."

"Men are free," she said, "in proportion to the distribution of the means of production and in the amount of individual benefit returned from individual effort.

"But what are we to think of a country in which millions and millions of farmers either live, as the share croppers in the South, as tenant serfs, or as millions of others, weighed down with mortgages?"

Asked about the rural resettlement program, she said: "I don't think it is nearly so important to put more people on the land as it is to get the ownership of the land into the hands of the people who are on it.

"This means Government loans at very low interest rates over long periods of time, together with education. It is a matter for long-time planning.

"It can't be solved within an administration, but for it we should mobilize all the idealism and courage of which we are capable as a people.

"I don't have any sympathy with Hitler or his program, but in his book he makes a brilliant statement, which is, that one program can only be combated with another.

"No program capable of stimulating enthusiastic allegiance is at present being offered in this country to combat Fascism. Yet the ideal has been here ever since the days of Jefferson and the Declaration of Independence.

"There is nothing in Europe or Asia which fits the American need, so let us try to settle the present situation in an American way, without resort to violent remedies."

Wanderbirds to Hike Over Potomac Floes

Eliza crossing the frozen river will be recalled this Sunday when several score Wanderbird hikers attempt a crossing of the dangerous ice floes which are piled 25 feet high in the Potomac River between the mouth of Difficult Run and Stony Acre Island, about 1 mile below Great Falls.

Led by a veteran Alpinist, the hikers will make their way over the jagged sheets of ice, holding on to a rope as a precaution against possible falls into blow holes or crevasses. Returning to the mainland, the Wanderbirds will hike along the old Washington Canal, and then along the gorge of Difficult Run.

G. W. Dedicates Surgical Room As a Memorial

Hospital Gift Offered by Teacher to Pay Mother Tribute.

A son memorialized his love for his mother yesterday in the dedication of a modern operating room for George Washington Hospital.

The son is Dr. Jacob Kotz, clinical professor of gynecology and obstetrics at the hospital. His mother, Anna Kotz, died a little more than a year ago. Dr. Kotz supplied the funds for the construction of the memorial.

Mrs. Joshua Evans, jr., member of the board of trustees of the hospital, said at the dedicatory exercises:

"In accepting this memorial we feel that we have the nucleus for the finest hospital in the National Capital."

Rabbi Abram Simon, of the Washington Hebrew Temple pronounced the invocation. Earl B. McKinley, dean of the school, presided at the ceremony.

The operating room contains equipment said to be the latest attainable. A lamp that casts neither shadow nor heat, an operating table capable of placing the patient in any position desired by the physician, and non-explosive electric plugs are included in the ultra's modern equipment. A lamp, fed by batteries and independent of the regular electric current also has been installed. This lamp is for use in case the regular electric light system fails during an operation.

Dr. Kotz, the younger of two boys of a family of five children, was born in Russia and came to the United States in 1907. He attended George Washington University and Medical School, and graduated in 1917. He has been with the hospital ever since.

Woman's Leg Crushed By Street Car Here

Miss Eddice Perkins 52, of 417 Second street northwest, was seriously hurt yesterday by a street car at Twelfth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Witnesses said her clothing caught on the car and she was dragged beneath the wheels of the rear truck. Her right leg was crushed and had to be amputated.

Police said that the operator of the car was W. T. Newton, of 939 Shepherd street northwest. The woman was treated at Providence Hospital.

Leave Bills' Passage Sped By McKellar

Proposes a Compromise Plan Acceptable to Copeland.

Sixty-Day Accumulative Period, Vacation Change Planned.

Enactment of the Government leave bills into law appeared imminent yesterday as Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, who has hitherto blocked their passage in the Senate, proposed a compromise that is expected to be acceptable to sponsors of the measures.

While McKellar declined to reveal his proposal, it was learned from another source that he wants the 30-day leave bill amended so that Sundays and holidays will be counted in the 30-day vacation and so that the accumulative feature will go up to only 60 days instead of 120 days.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, stated that, while he had not talked with McKellar, the compromise would be satisfactory to him. Copeland has been the sponsor of the bills in the Senate.

McKellar said he would confer with representatives of the National Federation of Federal Employes, the American Federation of Government Employes and N. P. Alifas, spokesman for the Machinists Union in the Navy Yard and other Government shops.

Luther C. Steward, president of the Federation of Federal Employes, declined to comment on the compromise plan until after he talks with McKellar.

The Tennessee Senator revealed his proposal to withdraw his objection to the leave bills, providing amendments are made, after an executive meeting of the Senate Civil Service Committee, during which the optional retirement proposal for civil-service employes was discussed and referred to a sub-committee headed by McKellar.

It is understood that McKellar has no objection to the sick-leave bill, which would reduce the time allowance for sickness to 15 days a year, but permit accumulations up to 120 days.

Job Insurance Bill Exempts Schools

An amendment to the District unemployment insurance act to exempt colleges, universities, religious institutions and schools they maintain from its provisions was offered in the House yesterday by Representative Ellenbogen (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

Chairman Norton, of the House District Committee, said she would call up the bill on Monday. No meeting of the committee is scheduled in the interim.

The bill was drafted after a somewhat broader exemption was sought Tueday on Capitol Hill by a delegation headed by Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the George Washington University.

Jessie Matthews Assumes Dual Role in New Musical Film on the Belasco Screen

British Singing Star Assumes Masculine Role

Comedienne Scores Again; We Receive Some Wires; Amusement Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"FIRST A GIRL." Gaumont British picturization of a story and screen play by Marjorie Gaffney, starring Jessie Matthews, with Sonnie Hale, Anne Lee, Griffith Jones, Constance Godridge, Eddie Gray and Donald Stewart. Directed by Victor Saville. Reviewed Wednesday afternoon.

Fast moving, spectacular and tuneful, this latest of the Gaumont British vehicles for the ingenuous, but genuine, talents of Jessie Matthews, youthful English singing comedienne, is perhaps the best musical that has come along from the other side.

It deals with a lovely young dressmaker's messenger girl, Elizabeth, who is caught in a rainstorm while on official duty, along with Victor, a female impersonator. Here is where the title begins to creep in.

The delivery is being made to a princess when Elizabeth succumbs to the downpour and the princess and her consort forthwith become infatuated with the dainty little messenger from the gownshop and her ostensible escort. The princess falls in love with Victor and Robert with Elizabeth.

This is the mainspring of a frolicsome and unimportant story that deals in high manner with farce, song, speetacle and chorus maneuvers in the best musical comedy tradition.

Follows Familiar Formula.

There is nothing particularly novel in the method of plot construction that "First a Girl" employs in making its heroine appear first as a girl, then as a boy, then as a boy pretending to be a girl. This is the sort of thing that Vesta Tillie used to do with consummate skill and it is the sort of thing, likewise, that Julian Eltinge could accomplish beyond the ability of any other member of his sex—not to mention Kitte Doner and a few other who might be recalled as adepts at this ambisextrous business, as the erudite Percy Hammond once denominated it.

Opposite the star in this film appears that favorite of the British public, Sonnie Hale, who has never seemed to these eyes to be quite so funny as he is hailed as being!

Cast Little Known.

The remainder of the cast do not so much matter since they are little known to American audiences. The princess is played with some aplomb by Anna Lee. The rest of the names you will be able to find in the small type paragraph preceding these observations.

The supporting bill, as usual, is composed of a diversified list of abbreviated camera subjects. Embraced in this catalogue of short subjects are the Pathe News, cartoon and musical items that add to the impressiveness of a bill that can be recommended to all seekers after agreeable light screen entertainment.

So wh odrops by the desk but our old friend, W. Jordan, one of the veterans of the avant-couriering business. Mr. Jordan is afraid he has a hit on his hands, and he may be right. He is two or three weeks ahead of the Shuberts' perennial production of "Blossom Time." After ten years of experimenting with this rearrangement of classic melodies by Sig Romberg, we would be inclined to share the Shubert doubt of the worth of the piece. I hope, along with Fred ,that it will be a hit!

Brickbats and Bouquets.

And then the Post-Impressionist, operating under as complete an anonimity as ever attached to an unsigned letter—to which we pay no attention whatever, at any time—takes a few skullfully veiled punches at our appraisal of "Exclusive Story."

On second consideration, there seems to be little enough between our estimates to have justified half a column.

The Impressionist objects to my having dubbed many of the incidents in "Exclusive Story" as "sordid and sensational."

I refuse to take that back. They were sordid and sensational and beyond the customary span of even the most extravagant melodrama.

And I resent the city editor—or maybe he was the managing editor—played by Raymond Hatton, who had to stan don his feet every time he wanted to pop off with a speech that no commandant of a city room ever would make.

Stuart Erwin may have been a grand motion picture reporter, but I tsill contend that the background of his activities was a completely specious representation of the so-called Fourth Estate. The Post-Impressionist admits as much.

This may not be as bitter a fight between two departments of the same paper as it seems. It probably all comes down to the fact that this column is not written by The Post-Impressionist's literary (sic) affinity.

From Mr. Arthur Gilbert, manufacturers' representative, building specialties, Chandler Building, 1427 I street northwest, I have a violent protest against any approval of Ethel Merman's voice as an asset to any film. Mr. Gilbert is of the opinion that anything emanating—he spells it emenating—from the Merman throat must be an assault upon the auditory nerves of any listener.

That, no doubt, is why Miss Merman has been a hit on the stage for the past several years, was taken from the leading role of "Anything Goes" to appear with Eddie Cantor on the screen in "Strike Me Pink" and makes records that sell by the million.

I suspect that Mr. Gilbert is one—and possibly the only one—of a disgruntled minority who feel that Miss Merman is a dud. Well, there she is, up there!

Final Analysis Note.

Does Dual Portrayal at Belasco

Having established herself in the minds of American audiences as a singing and dancing comedienne of accomplishment in "Evergreen," Jessie Matthews now comes to the screen of the Belasco Theater in the dual role imposed upon the star of "First a Girl." Miss Matthews, in this subject, takes on something the stature of a Vesta Tillie, Dorothy Mackaill, or any of the others you might care to name who can do male and female delineations equally well.

Woman Fights Way In Snow to Serum

Oakland, Md., Feb. 5 (AP).—Mrs. Earl Beckman, snow-bound at her home since January 23, managed to reach Oakland today to continue the treatments necessary to protect her from hydrophobia.

Somewhere along the way she was passed by E. C. Peck, Garret County health officer, who was battling snow drifts to reach her home at North Glade to administer the serum. She was bitten by a mad dog December 11 and had received 6 of the 14 required treatments before being snowed in.

Joseph Beckman, jr., also of North Glade, received the last of the treatments today. He was bitten at the same time as was Mrs. Beckman. Mrs. Beckman plans to remain in Oakland as long as necessary to complete the treatments.

Minerd, who resigned on January 6 to become Fayette County treasurer. The term ends on the first Monday of January, 1933. Mayor Younkin resigned as director of the Department of Accounts of Finance. ## Three Go On Trial As Assassins of King

Aix-en-Province, France, Feb. 5 (AP).—Trial of three Ustachi gunmen, charged with complicity in the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia, started today in an atmosphere of legal decorum.

Both prosecution and defense, anxious to avoid the confusion which broke up the first trial last November, devoted the first day to careful preliminaries.

Health Budget

culosis Hospital, he said, would be "little short of a calamity. How can any improvement in the tuberculosis rtae be expected?"

He also pointed to the shortage of nurses at the Glenn Dale Sanitarium where only 23 nurses are provided for. They have under their care 300 tuberculosis children.

"The merical society," he said, "cannot view without concern such a wholesale neglect of the health of the city."

He paid tribute to the ability of Dr. Ruhland and warned that the health officer and his stiff, in their efforts to give Washington a good health administration, will have their hands tied right at the outset if the present estimates are approved.

Wild Life Unit Names Darling As Acting Head

National Federation Aim of Conservationists at Meeting Here.

Jay N. (Ding) Darling, widely known cartoonist and until recently chief of the United States Biological Survey, was unanimously elected acting president of the "General Wildlife Federation" yesterday as the North American Wildlife Conference took concrete steps toward a national conservation-restoration program.

In a harmonious organization session, the 1,500 delegates to the conference adopted a constitution which creates the General Wildlife Federation and provides for headquarters in Washington.

Three vice presidents were elected: Former Senator Frederick C. Walcott, of Connecticut, representing the East; I. T. Quinn, of Alabama, the South and Central region, and William L. Finley, of Portland, Oreg., the West.

Nominations of the four officers, drawn up at a caucus in which all 48 States were represented, were unopposed and no candidates were named from the floor. Carl D. Shoemaker, secretary of the conference and of the Senate Committee on Conservation of Wildlife Resources, emphasized that the elections were temporary and that permanent officers will be chosen after the constitution has been ratified by the several States and the federation is officially established.

Aims of Federation.

Purposes of the federation will be:

"To organize all agencies, societies, clubs and individuals which are or should be interested in the restoration and conservation of wildlife into a permanent, unified agency for the purpose of securing adequate recognition of the needs and values of wildlife resources.

"To develop a comprehensive program for the advancement, restoration and conservation of wildlife.

"To present to the public such pertinent facts, discoveries and information as may contribute to the solution of the problems involved in the restoration and conservation of wildlife."

Each State, Territory and the District of Columbia will have one representative in the federation, which will be incorporated as a non-profit cororation under laws of the District.

The Constitution provides for a 19-member board of directors, six selected at large at the annual meetings of the federation and the others elected by State representatives of the 13 regions into which the United States and Territories have been divided.

Regional Directors.

N. Marks Bump, Binghamton, N. Y.—New York, New Jersey, District of Columbia, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland.

A. C. Heyward, Columbis, S. C.—West Virginia, Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina.

I. T. Quinn, Montgomery, Ala.—Georgia, Florida, Mississippi and Alabama.

Kenneth Taylor, Louisville, Ky.—Tennessee, Kentucky, Arkansas and Missouri.

L. A. Colby, Chicago, Ill.—Ohio, Indiana and Illinois.

W. J. P. Aberg, Madison, Wis.—Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

William J. Tucker, Austin, Tex.—Oklahoma, Louisiana and Texas.

Frank J. Brady, Atkinson, Nebr.—North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas and Iowa.

Elliott Barker, Santa Fe, N. Mex.—Colorado, Utah, Arizona and New Mexico.

Joseph S. Dixon, Berkeley, Calif.—California and Nevada.

G. W. Grebe, Kuna, Idaho—Idaho, Wyoming and Montana.

In a roll call, chairmen of 26 State delegations answered "yes" to the question, "Have you begun organization of State federations?" Under the contemplated setup, the national program will be organized by regions, States, districts and counties.

A standing ovation, punctuated by whistling, cheers and rebel yells, greeted Shoemaker's announcement that the caucus had proposed Darling for acting presidency of the federation.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Joint recital by Grete Stueckgold, soprano, and Charles Kullmann, tenor, in the Mayflower Hotel ballroom Wednesday morning. Program: For soprano—"O Had I Jubal's Lyre" (Handel), "The Lass with the Delicate Air" (Arne), "La Danza" (Rossini), "Der Nussbaum" (Schumann), "Marias Wiegenlied" (Reger), "Mignon" and "Er ist's" (Erich Wolff), "Le Roi de Thule" and "Air des Bijoux" from "Faust" (Gounod); For tenor—"Lungi dal caro bene" (Sarti), "Vittoria, Mio Core" (Carissimi), "Vainement, Ma Bien Aimee" (Lalo), "La Fleur Que Tu m-avais Jetee" (Bizet), "Allerseelen" (Strauss), "Es Blinkt der Thau" (Rubinstein), "My Lovely Celia" (arr. Munro), "In the Silence of Night" (Rakhmaninov); For soprano and tenor—Duet from the garden scene of "Faust" (Gounod).

Making his first appearance in Washington since his recent elevation to the Metropolitan artistic staff, Charles Kullmann gave pleasure to the ear with his virile and firm voice, which is well supported on the breath and deftly managed in phrasing. He has a confident presence, and this assurance is based on musical merit. His lower and middle tones are especially agreeable in their dark resonance, but his high tones are not as free from construction as one could wish. Their vibrancy is a little muted where clarity is desirable.

This remediable flaw in production is not a deterrent to one's enjoyment of his dramatic forcefulness. He holds a steady rein on temperament, controls the tonal volume discreetly, and builds effective climaxes. His voice is essentially suited to emotional urgencies rather than to lyric dalliance.

Grete Stueskgold, who is no stranger to be appraised on trial, was cordially welcomed by the audience. In excellent voice, she disclosed its clear quality, its rondures of tone, and its flexibility with her customary skill. One fancied that her attack on high notes missed the exact center now and then, though the lapse in pitch was almost imperceptible. Her readings had the charms of grace and ease.

The program was too platitudinous to deserve comment, save for the two fine songs by Erich Wolff. His setting of Goethe's ever-magical "Kennst du das Land" is highly original in treatment and sensitive to the poet's prosody, while "Er ist's" has a contagious exultancy.

Police Head Gives Talk.

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 5.

A BIT after 10 o'clock this morning, our train whistled and snorted and wheezed to a stop in this city . . . Which might be likened to the cork in the bottle of this bottle-necked State of Florida . . . If nature has designed an escape-proof State, this is it, because northern entrances and exits from Florida must be made through Jacksonville, unless a miscreant can get away in an airplane . . . As a result, in this State, citizens freely park their automobiles in the streets at night, knowing full well that the robbers will be trapped at Jacksonville before they can say "Jack Robinson" or its Southern equivalent.

• • • •

Fresh from the ice-rutted boulevards of New York, your correspondent was cheered no end at Jacksonville by the sight of substantial citizens wearing nothing more substantial than white flannels and white shirts . . . "It was right cold here for a spell," said the man who sold me a copy of the Times-Union at the station, "but that old sun was just kidding" . . . They have a great fondness for their sun in this State, and are not inclined to sulk on the infrequent occasions he hides his head in the clouds.

• • • •

In a short while, we will be passing through St. Augustine, and if the train is not making too great a clackety-clack, those of us on the observation car platform may be able to hear the cathedral bells tolling their ageless benediction across the blue waters of Matanzas Bay . . . This town, one of the oldest cities in the United States, has a definite charm and character . . . It does not have to shout its antiquity on the signboards . . . It is written across the face of the city itself . . . I'd like to have time to get off here and see the patriarchal city again, for a host of sentimental reasons . . . I'd like to see the Alcazar Hotel stir to life once more the ghosts that once filled its lobbly with laughter . . . To see the guns that stick their blunt noses from the parapets of Fort Marion . . . The tiny twisted streets and the ancient Palmetto trees that border the roadsides . . . I'd like to ride again in the ancient hansom cabs that move slowly about the narrow streets, with venerable colored cabbies scratching their gray-thatched heads as they seek to arrive at the total indebtedness of their fares . . . Picturesque and charming is St. Augustine, with the city gates hanging in their sockets and ready to be chained into position at a moment's notice . . . As though the Spanish dons, who once ruled the place, were expecting an attack from the English or the Indians.

• • • •

These old cities have a compelling fascination for me . . . Quebec exerts the same spell, and night after night, on our last visit to Quebec, I'd find myself drawn to the window in our rooms at the Chateau Frontenac . . . Peering through the darkness to the opposite shore and peopling the rival slopes with the armed forces of Wolfe and Montcalm . . . There is a certain bravery to these old cities that defies analysis, and there is, too, a wistfulness that is almost bittersweet . . . Turn me loose in one of them and you can have the rest of the world to yourself . . . I guess I get along with ghosts.

• • • •

The city desk didn't know of this curious yen for old cities when they gave me permission to go from Miami to New Orleans for the Mardi Gras on February 21 . . . Ever since I was a kid, I've wanted to see New Orleans, with its great markets and its historic Dueling Oaks, St. Roch's Chapel, the French Opera House and the streets lined with balconies . . . This is probably the only city in the country where devout residents use the "Personal" columns of the newspapers to publicly express their thanks and appreciation to the patron saints for favors granted . . . I want to see the Convent of the Ursuline nuns, erected in 1734, and described so well by Lyle Saxon in his "Fabulous New Orleans" . . . To see the Louisiana city, and particularly while the famed Mardi Gras is in progress, will be a rare treat to me, and I'll wire you all about it.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

In Defense of Chaplin.

Hollywood, Feb. 5.

THE most important picture made in Hollywood this year, Charlie Chaplin's "Modern Times," is being released. The first man to be called genius, in a town now saturated with them, will endeavor to hold his championship rating, fighting, you might say, out of his class.

There are many who believe that Charlie Chaplin is dated, and they expect the flicker, ironically titled, "Modern Times," to prove it. It is five years since Chaplin released a picture; during that time there hasn't been one silent feature. Chaplin made "City Lights" after talkies were a year and a half old, and the public had not been educated to forget the silent medium. Today, a silent flicker is a relic, the method of acting for them is considered obsolete. Can Ajax Chaplin defy the lightning and thunder of sound?

A new generation has grown up that does not know the Chaplin of the screen. They may wonder if their fathers were too busy in proclaiming Charlie a genius.

• • • •

This is being written before the picture is released. I haven't seen "Modern Times," except for the brief scenes flashed on the studio screen as Charlie, playing the role of Bach Chaplin, was writing and recording his own music—with assistance.

Chaplin, the true artist, is concerned about every picture he manufactures, but more so about "Modern Times." He realizes the handicaps he has to overcome. He summoned only his friends, receptive people, to his hilltop house to appraise the picture. Indeed, a man high in power in United Artists said to me: "If Chaplin had his way, he would never release the picture, but would only let his friends see it."

• • • •

There can be no question that Barnum Chaplin is the greatest showman of this generation. It may be mere coincidence that Einstein and Chaplin were friendly before the release of "City Lights," and that H. G. Wells visited Chaplin directly before the exhibiting of "Modern Times," but let them not try to deprive Chaplin of every great gesture. Even the skeptics can't deny that Svengali Chaplin accomplished the master task of creating a movie star in the person of Paulette Goddard. It is impossible to cite another instance in which a producer has taken a young lady out of the chorus—Paulette's last job was that of a Goldwyn girl in "The Kid From Spain"—and handled her so skillfully that Miss Goddard now has the rank and respect accorded a top-notch performer. Paulette Goddard, without having appeared as a principal in a picture, is as well known to movie fans as many stars.

• • • •

Speaking of Miss Goddard, the glamorous Dietrich said to me: "There is one girl on the screen that I envy—Paulette Goddard. Just think, she's the only actress in the world who's in a picture and doesn't have to speak. There will be mystery about her. I would give anything to be in her place." Yet, at the Hollywood gatherings, they would have you believe that Chaplin didn't discover Miss Goddard, but that she discovered Chaplin.

• • • •

To produce "Modern Times" cost a million and a half dollars. The picture took almost a year in the actual making. This doesn't include the years that Chaplin thought about it, for certainly, at this late date, no one is going to deny that Chaplin is a "thinker." There have been articles stating that the flicker was loaded with propaganda. Chaplin denies this. The picture merely had an idea, which, if revolutionary, isn't Charlie's fault.

Chaplin is as good a business man as he is an artist, perhaps better, and regardless of the critical reception accorded "Modern Times," he will make another fortune. In selling this picture, the exhibitors feel that Il Duce Charlie wants as much from them as Mussolini demands from Haile Selassie.

• • • •

"Modern Times" is strictly a one-man picture, the only work of its type to come out of Hollywood. Charlie was Shakespeare Chaplin, for he wrote it; Thalberg Chaplin, for he produced it; Leonardo di Vinci Chaplin, for he designed the sets; Mozart Chaplin, for he wrote the musical score; Garrick Chaplin, for he acted in it. Those who are ready to wash up Chaplin have plenty of people to wash up for one person. Chaplin is a pioneer, and regardless of the opinion about "Modern Times," should be admired for the work he has done. "Modern Times" may not be as fine or as great as "The Kid," "Shoulder Arms" or "The Gold Rush," but it is too much to expect anyone to follow in the shoes of Charlie Chaplin—even Charlie Chaplin.

Then stop worrying right now—because here's a simple, easy, pleasant way to correct that condition, bring your weight down to normal. Without dieting, without exercises, without drastic purging!

For many years physicians the world over have known and prescribed a famous corrective for abnormal obesity. It has been taken with amazingly beneficial results by thousands of women who were "too fat."

This corrective is the chief active ingredient of Marmola, prepared in tablet form by one of the leading medical laboratories of America. You simply take a tablet of Marmola 4 times a day, and start at once to get rid of burdensome fat.

It sounds miraculous, but thousands of women who have taken Marmola, as directed, might well tell you this story if they had the chance.

Since 1907, more than 20,000,000 packages of Marmola have been purchased—and what greater recommendation can be had?

Today—buy a package of Marmola, and start at once. You will soon experience Marmola's benefits. When you have gone far enough, stop taking Marmola. And you will bless the day when you first learned about this wonderful reducing agent!

THE HEIGHT OF THE HAZARD.—Here is the problem in graphic display. The car on the left has stopped for the light at the military road transversing the field as the Florida Flier zooms onto the runway. Many foolhardy drivers, however, ignore the lights, depending on nontechnical judgment in avoiding arriving and departing planes. The planes, on the other hand, must gauge their flight from the direction of the wind, a condition about which the motorist is ignorant.

BIRD'S-EYE VIEW OF AIRPORT DISPUTE.—Washington may lose its air-mail base if the airport across the Potomac in Virginia is forced to close because of the traffic hazard of a military road across the landing strip (shown arrowed, in section between two traffic lights installed by airport officials). Attempts to close the road have been blocked by Arlington County residents, and the War Department has declined to sanction traffic control. Note tracks in snow where planes must cross the road to take off and alight.

1,061 Entries Poised for Opening

Little Bavarian Village Is Packed for First Events This Afternoon.

Greece to Lead Parade Into Stadium for Ceremony; Officials Ready.

By Paul Gallico.

Copyright, 1936, by the Chicago Tribune-New York News Syndicate, Inc.

GARMISCH-PARTENKIRCHEN, Germany, Feb. 5.—Ice and snow athletes of 28 nations will march into the big ski stadium at 10:30 tomorrow morning for the opening ceremonies of the fourth winter Olympics. Music, gunfire and the ringing of bells will mark the official opening by Adolph Hitler, head of the Nazi Government, who will say only "I declare the fourth Olympic winter games opened."

Then the German ski champion, Willy Bogner, will take the Olympic oath for the entire group of 1,061 athletes, and the games will be under way. Conditions are perfect, with plenty of snow and ice.

Germany Last.

The athletes will arrive at the stadium for the opening ceremony in alphabetical order, except that Greece has the place of honor in the lead, with Germany bringing up the rear and the United States next to last.

All the German big shots are present, including Hitler, Herman von Goering, minister of aviation; Dr. Josef Goebbels, minister of propaganda; Rudolph Hess and Herr Luts, also cabinet members. But there will be no wind-bagging. No party uniforms will be worn by civilians during the games, but both German anthems will be played after Hitler is seated. Then there will be a parade of nations.

Only a speech of one minute's duration will be made by Ritter von Halt, Olympics president. Competition begins in the afternoon with a hockey game between America and Germany.

Nice Fight in Sight.

A last-minute hockey row is brewing in protest against the English team, playing six English-born Canadians. Avery Brundage, head of the American Olympics committee, says no protest has yet been made, but the matter will be inquired into late tonight. Brundage says that while England may be within her technical rights, the question is Where will they stop? Will they also use Canadian athletes in the summer games if they are within the rules? The rules may need to be changed anyway. The hockey meeting promises the first good shindig here.

The bob trouble has been smoothed out and the American bob has received the official OK of the committee. Gustavus Kirby has been appointed official bob run timekeeper. He is a member of the International Jury.

Americans Favored

The bobbers worked out today. Hubert Stevens, of New York, made a fine run down the incline, using the new American bob. The Italian, French and Luxemburg crews crashed during today's practice runs and it looks like the bob events are in the pockets of the Americans.

A huge throng is gathering for the events and there is great excitement hereabouts. The press barracks are packed with correspondents writing stories in 20 different languages. The telegraph and telephone lines to Paris, Berlin and London are jammed.

Your correspondent descended Mount Kreuzeck on skiis today in order to see what the athletes must do. I skied down the almost perpendicular ice slopes, mostly on my back. The downhill skiers, both girls and boys, are the world's bravest. They whizz around trees, rocks and huts at 60 to 70 miles an hour and take terrible chances. My skimmer is doffed to them.

Board Bars Horse From Santa Anita

In a brief statement, the stewards said they did not believe the horse "will do his best at all times."

Stoeffen Is Married; Lott His Best Man

The ceremony was performed at Hollywood Wedding Chapel before 30 persons, including the bride's mother and Stoeffen's father and mother. Naomi Jordam, film actress friend of the bride, was maid of honor. George M. Lott, jr., Stoeffen's former partner in winning the national doubles championship, was best man.

Oklahoma Names Cox; Appointment Condition

Stillwater, Okla., Feb. 5 (AP).—Conditional appointment of Ted Cox, former Tulane University football coach, as coach at Oklahoma A. and M. College was announced late today by Henry Iba, athletic director. The selection must be approved by the State Board of Agriculture.

With Shirley Povich.

Mr. Melvin C. Hazen, District Commissioner,
District Building, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mr. Hazen:

I see by the papers that you vetoed the bill to legalize racing in the District. Come, come, now, Commissioner, surely this is a joke. I mean to you, of all people, to give the racing bill the works. Unless memory plays me false or my eyesight betrayed me all last fall at Marlboro, Pimlico, Laurel and Bowie, I saw you in the clubhouses not once, or twice, but a good many times.

POVICH.

What is good enough for a District Commissioner, Mr. Hazen, is too good for the Washington public, apparently. At least that's the view I get from the recommendation you handed down on Mrs. Norton's bill which would permit a track in Washington. I know that your confreres, Mr. Allen and Mr. Sultan, concurred in your thumbs-down vote on District racing but they are more easily excused. They don't race horses as you do.

Irrespective of the merits of the racing bill, my dear Commissioner, your stand in the matter is about as consistent as some of the performances of your race horses, if, again, I remember rightly. If legalized racing is the sin that you apparently voted it, Mr. Hazen, then how come you countenance it in Maryland to the extent that you are a frequenter of the Maryland tracks, and in Virginia to the extent that last year you came out publicly in favor of the legalization of racing in that State.

In case you forget, Mr. Hazen, your opinion on the subject did not carry a great deal of weight with Congress last year. If I remember rightly, you were one of the three Commissioners who reported the Black racing bill unfavorably a year ago, only to see it passed by the House despite the Commissioners' official stamp of disapproval. I have known the District Commissioners to be wrong before. A few months after they turned down a District boxing bill with the notation that "there was no public sentiment in favor of boxing in the District," 28,000 jammed Griffith Stadium for a fight card.

I SEE by the papers, too, Commissioner, that your vice squad has been busy for several months and, before your time, for several years, cleaning up the bookmaking joints that infest the city. Legalized racing would cure that situation, if you but realized it. Instead of the surreptitious wagering that goes on in office buildings, in Government departments and on street corners, you'd have that money going through the mutuel machines, with the District getting its cut of 3½ per cent of every dollar that was bet.

That money that passes into and out of the hands of the bookies would be taxable under a pari-mutuel law, Commissioner. Wherever you find legalized racing, you find precious few bookies doing business. Miami, eager for the tax on all wagers, had little difficulty in cleaning up its joints, and when the races are running in Maryland the bookies close up shop rather than compete with the organized forces of the law. It's history that legalized racing runs the joints out of business.

Perhaps, Mr. Hazen, the District doesn't need the revenue that legalized racing would bring it. Perhaps the District has nobody on relief, no charitable institutions clamoring for funds and no free clinics. But then again, perhaps it does, and if the District Commissioners can kiss off the dough that legalized racing would bring to the city, why, maybe you know best.

Racing has its evils, of course, Mr. Hazen, but so does repeal. I'd say the two are kin, depending for their success upon moderation. But at least legalized racing, like prohibition repeal, tears down that vast aura of hypocrisy that the Nation knew in the days of prohibition. But this isn't what I started out to say, Mr. Hazen. What I was getting at is that you, of all people—a race horse owner, breeder and frequenter of the tracks, vetoed the race bill. What's the matter? Don't you want to let the rest of the folks in on your fun? Yrs. in sport,

Sparmate of Louis Will Scrap Tonight

Thirty-two rounds of toe-to-toe slugging is promised in the first of a series of all-colored boxing shows to be presented at Turner's Arena tonight. It is planned to present similar shows twice every month, if tonight's card and crowd live up to expectations.

In a feature scheduled for 10 rounds, Tiger Lew Flowers, a sparmate of Joe Louis, will tackle Young George Godfrey, a 220-pound Baltimore beak biffer.

Flowers generally is credited with giving Louis his best workouts when the Brown Bomber was in training for his successful onslaught against the rugged chin of Max Baer last summer.

Lurking in a good position to steal the show will be an eight-round semifinal between Meyer Rowan, New York lightweight, and Young Harry Wills, a clever and willing Baltimore veteran.

Willie Green and K. O. Clark will meet in a six-round preliminary.

Sam Wolfe, Star In School, Marries

Sammy Wolfe, 1935 graduate of Takoma-Silver Spring High School, where he was one of the foremost athletes in the institution's ten-year history, was married this week to the former Miss Hilda Cruit, of Takoma Park.

Wolfe, a resident of Silver Spring and son of Garland Wolfe, automobile dealer, gave up a promising athletic career at Georgetown University. He was a member of the freshman court squad and a candidate for the baseball and golf teams.

Wolfe was a member of The Post's all Montgomery County high basketball team in 1934 and was the outstanding player on The Post's all inter-suburban team last year. He led the Montgomery County individual scorers in 1934 and was runner-up the following year. He fielded 1.000 at the shortstop on Silver Spring High's county championship baseball team in 1935 and was also a member of the golf team.

U. S. Not Aware Of Olympic Protests

Rubien Says That English Hockey Players Are Eligible to Play.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—So far as American Olympic authorities here are concerned, no protest has developed over the presence of Canadian-trained hockey players on British or other European teams taking part in the winter sports championships at Garmisch-Partenkirchen.

"It has been well known for some time that from 50 to 100 Canadian hockey players have gone to Europe, within the past year, to play on club teams or try for places on the Olympic teams," said Fred W. Rubien, secretary of the American Olympic committee and chairman of the winter sports committee.

Strictly Eligible.

"So far as we are aware, however, all the players selected for the English hockey team are English-born. Therefore, they are strictly eligible, even though they developed their skill in Canada. No question can be raised, except on grounds of nationality or amateur status."

Ain't such activity subject to scrutiny under the head of subsidizing and recruiting Rubien was asked.

"Perhaps, but the international athletic authorities are not obliged to solve that problem, as such, unless the eligibility of an individual is challenged, for specific reasons, there is no basis for action or interference."

Rubien pointed out that there have been many Olympic precedents to justify the presence of England's Canadian-trained hockey team.

"Several noted athletes developed or trained in the United States have gone back to represent their native land in Olympic competition," he said. "Finland recalled such distance running stars as Hannes Kolehmainen and Willie Ritola.

"Once an athlete has competed in the Olympics, for his native or adopted land, he cannot shift allegiance in any future Olympic competition. Thus Mrs. Molla Mallory, competing first for her native Norway in the Olympic tennis, was not able thereafter to represent her adopted country, the United States, although she married an American and became a citizen here."

Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, Feb. 5 (AP).—The International Ice Hockey Federation voted unanimously tonight to uphold Canada's suspension of James Foster and Alexander Archer, members of the British Olympic ice hockey team who formerly played in Canada. The vote, from which three representatives abstained, bans the two players from competition in the winter Olympic games.

The decision hinged upon a Canadian rule forbidding players to transfer from Canadian teams to those of other countries without first obtaining permission from the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association. The eligibility of the British players was not otherwise challenged.

Jimmy Londos To Resume Wrestling

Says Retirement Pleased Enemies Too Well and Needs More Funds.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Feb. 5.—Jimmy Londos, Greek philosopher with a strong mind and a strong back, has decided to return to the wrestling wars after an eight months' layoff since losing the world's heavyweight championship to the 23-year-old Irishman, Danno O'Mahoney.

Since his broad shoulders were pinned to the mat by O'Mahoney last June, Londos has not engaged in a match, or an exhibition. He's done nothing but rest. Now he desires to determine his mental attitude toward a "comeback." If he finds the sport has the same old lure he plans to continue in the hope of regaining the title. Otherwise he will quit for good. To determine his mental attitude he plans engaging in several exhibition matches, the first of which will be in Detroit Friday night.

The 37-year-old Greek, who does not look any older than 25, made known his decision today at a conference to which newspaper writers had been called.

Londos explained he had three reasons for returning to the sport.

"First," he said, "my absence from the game has pleased my enemies too well. It is my intention from now on to cause them trouble and worry.

"Second, I need to earn money.

During his eight-month lay-off, Londos has taken exercise almost daily. He appears to be in perfect physical condition. Always a light eater and a follower of exemplary habits, Londos regards his health and physical condition as the finest things in life.

Londos is regarded as one of the greatest showmen in the sport. Sometimes he would hang on the ropes like a monkey, or possibly would allow his opponent to throw him all over the place, in the interest of entertainment or thrills. But he enjoys the reputation of being a good sportsman, in the ring or out of it.

Coffman, Marberry Sign With Giants

New York, Feb. 5 (AP).—Two former American League pitchers signed contracts with the New York Giants today.

One was Dick Coffman, 29-year-old right-hander, who was purchased from the St. Louis Browns last fall. The other was George (Firpo) Marberry, who signed as a free agent after drawing his release from the American League umpiring staff. During his pitching days, Marberry starred as a relief hurler with both Washington and Detroit.

The Giants also announced the unconditional release of Catcher Glenn Myatt, who joined the team in mid-season after being cut adrift by the Cleveland Indians.

Wes Ferrell Visions Pro Golf As a Career When Arm Fails

By the Associated Press.

GREENSBORO, N. C., Feb. 5.—Wesley Ferrell, winner of the recent professional baseball players' tournament, is looking forward to a career as a golf professional when he is "through" as a ball player.

George Corcoran, professional at the Starmount course here and the Red Sox twirler's golf tutor, said today Ferrell had confided his plans to try the pro game when his pitching arm gives out. And Corcoran believes he will be "one of the best in the country."

"He can go just as far in golf as he has in baseball," said the Starmount pro, who has been playing with and teaching Ferrell for the last three years.

"He has a sound swing and beautiful rhythm. I'll venture the prediction that in another two years or so he'll be one of the finest golfers in this country."

Wesley has been playing golf only three years and in the baseball players' tournament scored 312 for 72 holes, an average of 78. The first time he played at Starmount three years ago his score was 109. Last summer he scored a 69, the amateur record for the course, which is 6,630 yards and has a par of 71.

If Ferrell turns successfully from baseball to professional golf, his career won't be without precedent. Bid Ed Walsh, one-time White Sox star, did it and now is professional at a Connecticut club.

McAvoy Back Today; Seeks Fistic Laurels

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—The boxing tom-toms will start beating again tomorrow when Jock McAvoy returns to New York with the most ambitious ring program ever undertaken by an invading pugilist.

McAvoy, holder of British titles in the middleweight and light-heavyweight or "cruiser class" heavyweight or "cruiser class," titles in both divisions.

If successful, he proposes to challenge Jimmy Braddock, Joe Louis or whoever is on top, for the world's heavyweight championship in 1937.

McAvoy is matched to fight John Henry Lewis, Negro holder of the light heavy or 175-pound title. The date has been shifted several times and is likely to be set for some time in March, at Madison Square Garden, to avoid conflict with the newly developed McLarnin-Canzoneri match.

If the Briton whips the Arizona Negro, he will seek a return bout at the middleweight limit of 160 pounds with Champion Eddie (Babe) Risko. McAvoy flattened Risko little more than a month ago in the Garden. It was a nontitles affair, with the invader scaling 168½.

"It's a big program Jock has in mind, but not an impossible one to tackle," said Dave Lumiansky, McAvoy's manager. "Jock can put on enough weight by next year to mingle with heavyweights. Remember that both Carentier and Tunney were lightweights before they fought Dempsey."

With two lucrative bouts in sight here, Tony Canzoneri, the lightweight ruler, has abandoned plans to go to London to fight Harry Mitzler, who represented England in the 1932 Olympics.

Andre Lenglet, the French heavyweight, struck by a cab the other night, is around and about again, swathed in bandages. He looks like he had been hit by Joe Louis.

Hoyas Girding Loins for N. Y. U.

HOME from another lacing, but still as cocky as only sophomores can be, Georgetown's basketball team, a predominately sophomore combination, rested yesterday before girding their loins for their biggest assignment of the season tomorrow night when they tackle New York University at Tech High School.

A victory over the Violets tomorrow will atone for all of the Hilltoppers previous basketball sins and restore them to the good graces of local fandom, although such a victory appears extremely remote. New York not only is undefeated thus far, but holds decisions over every conference champion in the Nation.

Several weeks ago Coach Cann's crew swamped North Carolina, running up a 23-point lead on the Tarheels in the first half. But with more games under their collective belt they have improved since then and expect to dispose of Georgetown in short order, the shortest possible.

A throng of 4,000 fans, all that can be accommodated under District fire regulations, is expected for the fray, and they should see the prettiest passing they have witnessed all season, to say nothing of pot-shooting. The Violets have six lettermen from last season and a slew of prize sophomore prospects. Capt. Bill Rubenstein, Milt Schulman, Irving Terjesen, Len Maidman, Irwin Klein and Perry Geffen are the veterans.

Rubenstein and Maidman are spearheads of the attack and key men in the team's offense. Both are expert ball handlers and deadly shots. In the first 11 games Rubenstein found the hoop for 42 field goals and 27 fouls, 111 points, while Maidman rang up 85. They shone brilliantly against Fordham, Dartmouth, California, Columbia, Kentucky and other top-notch opponents.

St. John's Wins 17th, Trims Charlotte Hall

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., Feb. 5.—St. John's, of Washington, won its seventeenth basketball game in 18 starts this season today, trouncing Charlotte Hall by a score of 36 to 20. Jimmy Giebel, of the visitors, tallied 16 points for individual honors.

Davis-Elkins Downed by G. W. Five

Colonials Capture 10 Straight at Expense of Mountaineers.

Ahead 19-15 at Turn, Locals Go On to Triumph, 40-28.

THE complacent Colonials of George Washington University clamped down on a cantankerous Davis-Elkins quintet in the second half of their game last night to win a 40-to-28 victory in the H street gym. A capacity crowd of 1,500 fans saw the game, which resulted in George Washington's tenth consecutive win.

Coming out for the final period, after being held to a 19-to-15 score in the first 20 minutes, the Colonials unleashed a brand of passing that far surpassed any governmental buck-passing seen here this winter and opened up numerous avenues through the visitors' zone defense for easy scoring plays.

"Mouse" Schonfeld's accurate long shots kept the downtown school out in front in the first half, and Hal Kiesel and Tommy O'Brien took up the scoring cudgel in the second half to clinch matters. Davis-Elkins, quicker on the draw than any club previously seen in town, resorted to long shots for the majority of its points in the first half, but found itself checked at every step in the final period.

Jerry Gainer and Ed Gutowski were outstanding for the West Virginians, but their combined efforts were not enough to offset George Washington's expert team play.

The Colonials let their guests have both barrels as the second half got under way and quickly doubled the score before Davis-Elkins counted. The eventual winners were woefully off form in foul shooting, converting only two of their 14 charity throws.

Davis-Elkins moves over to Brookland tonight for a game with Catholic University that will conclude their two-day stand in this territory.

Miss Dettweiler Loses First Match

By the Associated Press.

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Feb. 5.—With 17-year-old Patty Berg showing the way, favorites advanced unscathed today in the first match play round of the Miami Biltmore women's golf tournament.

Despite her protestation she "just couldn't get the feel of the game," the red-haired Minneapolis school girl played exemplary golf in defeating Mrs. Blanche Fitzgibbon, of New York, 7 and 6.

Four over women's par for the out-going nine, Patty finished in a flurry of birdies, snaring two on the final three holes.

Helen Dettweiler, Washington, D. C., star, lost to Frances Owen, of Jacksonville, 5 and 4. Miss Dettweiler's 92 qualified her easily yesterday.

Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., the winner last year, disposed of Mrs. Lawrence Schwab, of New York, 7 and 5.

Miami's own veteran linkswoman, Maureen Orcutt Crews, defeated Mrs. Guy Butler, of Atlanta, 7 and 6.

Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, Mo., another of the Nation's top flight feminine golfers, won a one-sided victory over Mrs. Harriet Masury, of Flushing, Long Island, defeating her 8 and 7.

Pretty Ellamae Williams, of Chicago, runner-up with Mrs. Crews, to Miss Berg in the medal round yesterday, played her usually steady game to trounce Mrs. John Arends, of Detroit, 7 and 5.

The parade will move into the stadium promptly at 11 o'clock, and 20 minutes later the President of the German organizing committee will deliver an address.

At 11:26 Hitler will declare that the fourth winter Olympics officially are opened. This declaration will be heralded with a salute of guns, ringing of bells, lighting of the Olympic fire and raising of the Olympic standard.

Virginia Five Gains 26-25 Extra Period Victory Over Navy

Smith's Foul Shots Win Thriller

2 Perfect 1-Pointers in Final 15 Seconds Are Margin of Victory.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 5.—With the Virginia Cavaliers behind 1 point and 15 seconds remaining in an extra-period tussle, Bob Smith, nimble-fingered Virginia forward, swished the cords for a pair of spectacular foul throws, handing a crippled Naval Academy basketball quintet a 26-to-25 setback here today. Twenty-five hundred court followers vainly sought to keep in their seats.

The Gobs, holding frantically to a 25-to-24 margin in dying moments, which saw Frank Shamer, star forward, escorted from the tilt and Capt. Fellows ejected on personal fouls, lost the thrilling contest by Frank (Tiny) Lynch's effort to retrieve the ball.

Smith Is Calm.

Lynch, towering Navy pivotman, who entered the fray in the extra session, fouled Bob Smith with 15 seconds to go. Smith, surprisingly calm, although realizing that the points meant victory, took aim and tossed both charity throws clean into the basket, tying the score and bringing victory to the Virginians.

The contest, one of the most thrilling witnessed here this season, was deadlocked 19-all when the regular game terminated. Four times the lead had switched, with Alan McFarland, Tar forward, keeping the sailors in the thick of the battle with his brilliant offensive and defensive work.

Discarding orthodox basketball for every opportunity to make a score, both fives scrambled over the court in the extra period. Mike Rindskoff, dribbling down the side lines, and netted a double-decker, but Bill Connor, Cavalier forward, grabbed a loose ball, tying the score with his lone tally of the tilt.

Gevinson Thumps Virginia Champion

Larruping Lou Gevinson, generally conceded to be the best featherweight prospect in this section, added another state to his territory last night at the National Guard Armory by thumping out a clean knockout victory over Brooks Bowen, 126-pound Virginia State champion, after 26 seconds of the third round. The bout was the feature of a series of amateur meetings.

Pat Cecchini's decision over Reeves Ammons, of the Richmond A. C., easily proved to be the highlight of the preliminaries. Winner of the Golden Gloves award for being the most improved amateur during 1935, Cecchini outmaneuvered his man from start to finish and received a rousing ovation from the capacity crowd, when he was declared the victor.

Lucky Strike Girls Vanquish Rosslyn

The Lucky Strike girls tightened the race for the leadership of the Ladies' District League last night at the Lucky Strike alleys, halting the fast pace of the leading Rosslyn team by winning two games. Lucky Strike's victory advanced them to within three games of the No. 1 position.

Blanche Wootten, the spark plug of Rosslyn's rise to the commanding position, topped the individual scoring with a 362 set.

With three wins over Jefferson Market, making 22 victories out of their last 24 games Southern Market pulled up to within three games of the first-place Loffler team last night in the District Grocers' League at Lucky Strike while the Loffler five were dropping a game to Hamilton's Market. Bennie Siegel, ace anchor man of Southern Market, collected two 135 games and a 363 set to feature the night's activities.

Harvard Hall Beaten In Table Tennis Play

The Paddlers gained first place in the District Table Tennis League "B" division last night at the District courts by upsetting Harvard Hall, 7 matches to 2. Capitol took a similar decision from Internal Revenue, while Tara Club whitewashed Sligo, 9 to 0.

Tough Citizen

YVON ROBERT.

Robert Poised To Destroy Mazurki

By George Considine.

YVON ROBERT, the unofficial world wrestling champion, will demonstrate how he got that way tonight at Turner's Arena, when he declares war on one "Sure Mike" Mazurki in the feature match of an all-star card. The 21-year-old Canadian is a protege of Henri De Glane, former world title claimant.

To prove that the crown should rest upon his noble brow, Robert can point to victories over Ed (Don) George and Jim Browning, former world champions; Ray Steele and Jumping Joe Savoldi, not to mention an unofficial decision over Champion Danno O'Mahony, himself.

Although Robert's victory over O'Mahony in an unscheduled set-to following Danno's bout with Frank Judson in Holyoke, Mass., has aroused clamor for a title match in Boston, the O'Mahony management has not yet seen fit to accept a challenge. Rumor has it that Robert will meet and beat the champ two days before O'Mahony is to return to the old country.

Rudy Dusek has his Cradle Split. O'Mahony has his Irish Whip, Jack Donovan has his Irish Flip, Jim Browning has his Airplane Scissors, Jim Londos has his Airplane Spin, Fred Grobmier has his Japanese Frog Scissors, John Paul Jones has his Figure-Four Scissors, Gus Sonnenberg has his Flying Tackle and Yvon Robert has his Carpet Beater. It's a combination this-a and that-a.

In the scheduled 45-minute semi-final Dean Detton, who in over six months local campaigning has never lost a bout, will be pitted against perhaps the sturdiest opposition to date in the person of George Koverly, one of the roughest journeymen in the ear-scrambling industry.

Ivan (the Terrible) Managoff has promised to exude pure Vladivostokian grunts in his preliminary struggletussle with Dr. Len Hall and Jack Hader, recent conqueror of Silent Abbott, rolls 'round and 'round with Irving Comeld. The debauchery starts at 8:30 p. m.

Mesmer on Radio.

Fred Mesmer, Georgetown basketball coach, will be interviewed tonight over Station WMAL by Lew Atchison, Post sports writer, at 6:15 o'clock. Mesmer will discuss tomorrow night's important game with his interrogator. Regular members of the Hoya quintet also will talk on the program.

Stark-Canzoneri Windmill Tilters But They're Rich.

By Jack Miley.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—A couple of dead-game guys have sadly overmatched themselves these last few days and we, for one, are sorry to see them trying to make passes with loaded dice. They're a cinch to wind up with the milkman and the morning papers, for the works are in against them. These windmill tilters are Umpire Dolly Stark and Lightweight Champion Tony Canzoneri, as fine a pair of lads as you'd meet anywhere, and, while we don't think much of their judgment, we've got to give 'em credit for plenty of ticker, which they'll surely need before they're through.

Dolly is fighting the National League for more douth and, needless to say, he won't get it. He thinks he's underpaid and he's probably right. The gallant little Canzoneri has gone and hooked himself up in a little business transaction with Jimmy McLarnin. Personally, we'd rather be in Umpire Stark's shoes. After all, fellows such as Ford Frick, Sam Breadon, Young Horace Stoneham—and we'll toss in old Judge Landis for good measure—can't hurt you like Irish Jimmy. Stark will have to stand some staggering smashes to the wallet, but Canzoneri will be lucky to escape with his life.

The funny part is, neither Dolly nor Tony need the dough they're shouting for. Stark, one of our most eminent ball-and-strike beagles, has been around a long while and should be pretty well equipped with this world's goods. In his off-seasons, while most umpires are living out of the old sock, Dolly coaches basketball up at Dartmouth; which is a profitable job in itself. The mumm-eared Canzoneri has earned a fortune in the ring and has held on to plenty of it. Tony owns a haberdashery shop on Broadway, a model stock farm up in New York State, and is on more than merely social terms with a couple of bank presidents—if that means anything in these hit-and-run financial times.

IT is the Gargoyle-kissed little Canzoneri we're worrying about, and Tony would probably appreciate it if we'd mind our own business. If we did, we'd be out of work, so he'll just have to bear with us in this great crisis. The New York State boxing commissioners, by okaying a McLarin-Canzoneri bout, have reached their all-time peak of assininity. If the expected happens, they should be held as accessories before the fact in a homicide. Next thing we know they will match up Joe Louis with Sixto Escobar, the bantam champ. A few weeks ago McLarnin was thinking seriously of invading the middle-weight ranks. Now he is going to fight a 135-pounder. Jimmy has always been notorious for picking his spots. The Al Singers, Sid Terrises and Ruby Goldsteins always had to give him poundage. This chiselling isn't Jimmy's fault. Pop Foster, his wily old manager—a cozy old citizen, who spends his leisure hours teaching coyotes to be cute, is the Shylock of the firm.

Blair Rally Futile; Roosevelt Winner

Roosevelt High added another suburban high school to its impressive victory list yesterday by staving off a late Montgomery Blair rally to win a low-scoring battle, 15 to 13, at Silver Spring. The game was a nearly perfect duplicate of the teams' previous battle, which the Rough Riders won, 16-15.

The eventual winners were in possession of a 6-to-5 lead at the first quarter but with baskets at a premium in the next period each team scored but one field goal and the Rough Riders led, 9-8, at half time.

Diamond Wants to Inherit Title of '1936 Wrong Guy'

By Jack Diamond.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—I know it is only February, but find I'm already making a fair bid for the 1936 wrong guy title. Maybe the success of the previous season went to my head.

Remember, I was the daring young man who went so bold as to nominate Joe Louis to beat Paulino (aw, I'm tired of pronouncing his name). Great Britain to retain the Davis Cup and the Princetons to slip past, somehow, please God, the Cornells. Oh, I was good, all right. No sports event was too tough for your young Yogi to step in, complete with crystal ball and form sheet, and call the winnah.

The new year still was a newborn, yowling red-faced infant when my unhappy reverses began and a fortuitous turn of events ran smack into a big stone wall to upset my prediction record. It was early in the afternoon, at a time when most of America must have felt shakily that New Year's Eve still was in merry session.

After refusing to grant Mr. Thornhill's Stanfords a ghost of a chance against S. M. U. in the Rose Bowl game, your deputy sat unhappily in the block-long press box of the huge white outdoor amphitheater—and watched young Bill Paulman slither across the Mustang goal. And in the very first quarter.

That was the hell even anyway the floats in the parade were very pretty.

If it hadn't been for Mr. Mushky Jackson, sergeant of the guard in Mike Jacob's entourage, we would have gone down on record a fortnight later in wintry Chicago as fingering Charley Retzlaff to belt the Brown Bomber with a lucky one off the floor.

As is his custom, Mushky, the Mr. Malaprop of pugilism, carefully filed our disatch in a hotel-corridor laundry chute and a substitute essay on ping pong or "professionalism in sport" was hastily composed. Mr. Jackson is the one who likes "sea lion" steaks and "millinery" herring, but that is another story.

So we pick Glenn Cunningham, the king of the milers, to maintain his supremacy over an excellent field last Saturday at Madison Square Garden's Millrose games. So the great Kansan rolls across the finish line No. 3, to Mr. Joe Mangan's No. 1 and the place position to Gene Venzke, who hasn't outrun Cunningham for who remembers when.

Now comes the Santa Anita Handicap on Washington's Birthday and if you think I'm going to pick the 7-4 favorite. Discovery, you must have holes in your head. They don't run that way for this department, not this year.

D.& H. Gunning For A. A. U. Crown

Coal Boys Have Plenty of Stars in Ranks; Beach Outstanding.

ONE of the toughest customers in the unlimited division of the District A. A. U. basketball championship which The Post will sponsor, starting February 18 at Heurich's gym is the Delaware and Hudson quintet.

This team won 11 games and lost one to tie Rinaldi, in the play-off, but this defeat in no way has damped the spirits and enthusiasm of the Delaware and Hudson boys.

Keenest player on the team seems to be this George Beach, a 6-foot giant, who played at Tech High School and last year with the District A. A. U.'s champions, Shell's.

Beach two years ago was with the Boys Club of Washington, and was its chief scorer. In the finals against Bureau of Investigation at Tech High, it was Beach who led Shell's to victory. With ten minutes to go, he was inserted into the game, placed on what's known as the "chopping block" and banged away at the hoops for five successful baskets.

Slim Mayfield played at Tennessee University, and is another 6-footer, while Don Garber is a product of Duke University. Joe Curtin is a veteran at the game, too.

The Delaware and Hudson boys were dealt a big blow a few weeks ago when its ace, Teddy Cappeli, formerly of Duke, was operated on for appendicitis.

Annapolis Beaten By Mount Rainier

In a Prince Georges league game, Mount Rainier will meet Laurel today in the fifth round play for county honors. The two teams met earlier in the season with Mount Rainier winning.

Landon Finishes Fast To Defeat St. Paul's

Landon Prep upset St. Paul's basketball team of Baltimore, 19 to 16, yesterday in the Landon gym to account for its second victory in three starts. Individual honors went to Crocker, of Landon, with 8 points.

Having set a blistering pace to lead 5 to 0 at the end of the first quarter and 10 to 6 at half-time, Landon cracked only to rally in the last two minutes by virtue of the timely shooting of Eaton.

World's Swim Record Set By Fick

Staunton Flash Covers 220 Yards in 2::15.8 at Woodstock.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

WOODSTOCK, Va., Feb. 5.—A large crowd tonight witnessed the unofficial breaking of the world's interscholastic record for the 220-yard swim by Peter Fick, Olympic star and one-man team of Staunton Military Academy team. Fick covered the distance in 2:15.8, which toppled the mark of 2:16.6, held by Johnny Marcionis, of Mercersburg Academy.

The Massanutten team, led by Beamer and Clarke, were at no time pushed by the weak Staunton team, and the score at the end of the lopsided meet read 47 to 28.

Eastern Is Victor As Shaner Stars

Buddy Shaner's 13 points were anything but unlucky for his Eastern teammates yesterday in the Gonzaga gym as the Lincoln Parkers defeated Gonzaga, 36-16.

Garnering 7 marks, Lowe was high for the Purple.

Eastern evidently decided to pile up a record count at the outset, for it was leading, 14-0, at quarter time. Smith finally enabled Gonzaga to break into the scoring column and the whole team functioned well to outscore Eastern in the second period.

Post Rewards Sportsmanship Of Youthful Tourney Rivals

By Bill McCormick.

LESTER MOCK and Angelo Pappas, the two kids whose sportsmanship set a new high in the recent Golden Gloves boxing tournament, will make the rounds Saturday in an afternoon and evening of fun arranged for them by The Washington Post.

Lester, who is a member of the Boys Club, earned the right to be feted by their actions in the finals of the 112-pound class in the novice class. After both boys had battled their way to the finals, Angelo's mother died. Despite his grief, the little Pappas kid showed up for finals, ready to fight, "because he thought it the sporting thing to do."

Officials, of course, told him he did not have to fight and notified Mock that he had won the gloves on a forfeit. When Lester found out why Angelo had forfeited, he refused to accept the gloves, but asked that they be given to "the poor kid whose mother had died."

Tour of Pleasure.

The two young sportsmen will be taken about on their tour of pleasure by Johnny Mandes, a former Central High School basketball star, who is one of the senior leaders of the Washington Boys Club and an organizer of the Junior Optimists Club of that organization.

The boys will start the day as guests of the management at Loew's Fox Theater. There they will witness one of their favorite child stars—Jackie Cooper—and a flock of other flicker performers in "Tough Guy" on the screen. Then they will go backstage to meet Johnny Burke, the Funnyboners and other members of the cast of the stage show.

From the Fox the kids will be taken to one of Washington's better restaurants, where they may eat steaks, ice cream, cake and whatnot to their hearts' content.

To See Bouts.

After dinner the boys will be the guests of the Catholic University boxing team at the Catholic University gymnasium, where the Cardinal clouters are meeting Western Maryland in a dual meet. Lester and Angelo will be guests of honor on the Cardinal bench where they will get an inside view of just what makes the wheels go 'round in college boxing.

The boys will be the best of pals for the day, but all that will be forgotten February 21 when, by mutual consent, they will box at the Knights of Columbus just to decide for their own satisfaction who would have won those golden gloves if they had met in the tournament.

Rinaldi Cagers Play Tonight at Heurich

Virginia Plays Maryland Tonight

Terrapins to Face Old Rivals; C. U.-Davis Elkins to Battle.

AS ambitious as the new office boy and on edge after a thrilling overtime victory over Navy, the University of Virginia's revivified basketball forces advance on College Park tonight for their first skirmish of the season with Maryland. Play will begin promptly at 8 o'clock.

The only other game scheduled on a local court tonight will find Davis-Elkins cavorting at Brookland against Catholic University's representatives. This will start at 8:30 o'clock.

Boasting a reputation for upsetting its major opponents and being upset by its minor foes, the Cavaliers will go into action determined to emulate the feat of their boxing team which defeated the Terrapins last week. But they may encounter more difficulties than they expect.

Maryland will be handicapped by the absence of big Vic Willis, towering center, whose lip was cut in last week's furious fray with North Carolina. The Old Liners won that one, 38-34, satisfactorily demonstrating that it can whip the best of them when in top stride. Ben Allen will replace Willis tonight if "Junior" is unable to start.

Virginia's starting line-up will be the same that downed Navy yesterday.

Frederick Lassies Eye Local Teams

Those Frederick (Md.) Coca Cola Buddies, by their own admission "one of the greatest girls' teams in the lively baseketball section around Frederick," are just dying to play again.

Yesterday, Fred Eisinger, who handles the publicity for the Heurich teams, received the following from the girls:

"Dear Mr. Eisinger: I'm so sorry our publicity agent spelled your name wrong last week. I know you won't mind, so I'm taking this opportunity to excuse ourselves and ask you please to say something in the Washington papers about our team.

"The Frederick (Md.) Cocoa Cola Buddies, one of the greatest girls' teams in the lively basketball section around Frederick, denied they were afraid to meet the young ladies of Washington's Bureau of Agriculture.

"Mr. Chris Heurich, Jr., has cordially renewed the Buddies' challenge to meet the Aggies and they are just dying to play Sunday."

Rassler On Air.

Dean Detton, former University of Utah football star, who will wrestle George Koverly in semi-final support of tonight's Robert-Mazurki feature at the Turner Arena, will be interviewed by Joe Holman over Station WOL from 8 to 8:15 p. m.

Old Line Approves Dr. Graham's Plan

The "Graham plan" for control of athletics in the Southern Conference, offered for adoption by Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, has the unqualified approval of the University of Maryland, it was announced yesterday.

In making known his decision to vote for the plan at the annual conference, meeting in Richmond on Friday and Saturday of this week, Dr. L. B. Broughton, chairman of Maryland's athletic board, said:

"If we were doing things in connection with our athletics that would not stand the light of publicity, then we probably would fight the Graham plan. But as we have nothing to conceal, we shall support it."

If adhered to strictly after being approved, if it is adopted, the plan will give the conference a status unequaled by any other collegiate organization in the country.

Corinto Wins Hialeah Racing Feature

Coequel Runs Second to Favorite

Pace-Setters Fold in Stretch; 10,000 See 'Double' Pay $184.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

HIALEAH RACE TRACK, Fla., Feb. 5.—Mrs. E. Denemark, whose horses have been dominating the running of feature races here, watched two of her stars hand the "one-two" punch of racing to the field in the Grade A handicap which topped today's program. Corinto was the winner but only after Top Dog, his stablemate, had run interference for him during the early stages of the mile test.

Ridden by Jockey Joe Renick, Corinto bounded past the judges three parts of a length ahead of Coequel, a gray mare. Third, and another length and a half away, came Mountainy Man. Four others accepted the issue.

The victory was a popular one and a relief to the favorite players who were partaking of their first success of the afternoon at even money.

The usual 10,000 regular and occasional customers witnessed the sport conducted under a clear tropical sky which featured a heavy-duty sun. Eevery one with a linen suit was wearing it.

Coequel was first to show in front when Starter Cassidy sent the field out of the chute. However, the Denmark entry soon got down to business. Jockey Gilbert hustled Top Dog into command and Coequel attempted to keep up. Corinto, at the moment, was finding his racing legs in the rear flight.

SEMAPHORE had nice speed while setting the pace, was slightly impeded when the winner swerved to the inside when taking the lead, recovered after being taken up and outstayed ST. MORITZ. A claim of foul against the winner was not allowed. ST. MORITZ moved up determinedly entering the homestretch, then was forced out by SEMAPHORE during the closing furlongs.

Latter, saved ground, finished strongly and outstayed EASIEST WAY. FAWN TICKET, backstretch, rallied nicely after being placed to punishment and was wearing the winner down steadily after coming to the outside for the final drive. EASIEST WAY, a slow beginner, slipped through on the inside in the last five-sixteenths and closed with a rush.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CORINTO (entry), $4.00, $2.40, $2.20; COEQUEL, $3.50, $2.60; MOUNTAINY MAN, $2.70.

CORINTO worked his way into contention steadily after reaching the backstretch, came through on the inside of TOP DOG entering the homestretch, took command at the final furlong pole and was under a severe drive to withstand COEQUEL. Latter outbroke TOP DOG, was not rushed when TOP DOG took command, followed close up and held on willing for the final issue. MOUNTAINY MAN, forced to race on the outside after reaching the backstretch, responded to punishment and finished with good courage.

VOTE BOY, going stoutly while holding a contending position early, came courageously when straightened into the homestretch and outfinished BRIGHT HAVEN when approaching the finish. BRIGHT HAVEN had much speed while setting the pace, saved ground, but failed to stay after moving into a clear lead midway of the homestretch. LADY HIGLOSS worked her way up on the outside after being outrun in the first half mile and finished gamely.

WOODLANDER, going in his best form, improved his position readily when shaken up, swung to the outside when engaging the leaders at the stretch turn, closed resolutely and was up in the last sixteenth. OLD STORY, raced forwardly, moved into a short lead midway of the homestretch, but could not withstand the winner under a stout drive. WACOCHE sprinted clear going into the backstretch, saved ground, held on well when vigorously ridden.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIG SHOW, $13.20, $8.40, $5.00; BELLE FILLE, $6.30, $4.40; BOMBASTIC, $6.20

BIG SHOW, taken to the outside for the start, had good speed to displace BELLE FILLE when straightened into the backstretch, withstood a tedious drive in the last three-sixteenths and barely lasted long enough. BELLE FILLE, taken under slight restraint, after being overtaken, rallied strongly to punishment and, coming again, was wearing the winner down at every stride at the close. BOMBASTIC, slow to gain her best stride, came to the outside when improving her position and closed stoutly.

PLAYFUL MARTHA, rated back off the leaders until leaving the back stretch, wore SMEAR down inside the closing furlong and barely lasted to beat SMEAR. Latter worked his way up steadily after being outrun early, came to the outside when reaching the homestretch, closed fast and would have been winner in a few more strides. EXETER sprinted into a clear lead, was rated until challenged, and held on well when vigorously urged.

At the Post . . .

Hialeah Race Track, Feb. 5.

Dear Al:

Jockey Johnny Gilbert has signed a contract to ride for Mrs. John Hay Whitney. Gilbert, who is riding here for the Shandon Farm, will report to Trainer Jim Healy on April 1. He topped the American jockeys in 1932. Sammy Renick is considering an offer to ride Hal Price Headley's Preeminent, stablemate to Whopper, in the rich Santa Anita Handicap, it was learned today. Benningites might do well to remember that Granny's Trade worked 6 furlongs in 1:12 2-5 this morning with a 125-pound stable boy aboard. Primo Carnera was among the new arrivals seen at the track today. As the meeting entered upon its eighteenth day, Jimmy Stout is showing the way to the veterans with ten winners, while Nick Wall, Johnny Longden, Eddie Litzenberger and Joe Renick are tied for second place with eight each. Eddie Arcaro, Bob Watson and Johnny Gilbert have six each. In the apprentice division, Ira Hanford and M. L. Fallon are tied with seven victories each. Sonny Workman, on the suspended list, is brushing up on his golf while keeping his weight down. Jockey No Boy Jacobs still says, "I can't do no good."

BILL.

First race—John's Birthday was the victim of a timid ride in his last race. Under strongest handling he should annex the opening number. Stiff competition can be expected from Four Spot which has trained well. Rocky Prince has been close consistently. Kawagoe and Hymn belong here.

Second race—Goldey F. has only to repeat the success that she registered in her debut to add another purse to her winnings. Chanting has raced consistently well and appears to be the most logical choice for the runner-up position. Divided Skirt encountered trouble in her last. She has trained well and may be a sleeper. Little Empress deserves consideration.

Third race—Senator D. has been threatening to annex his first brackets in recent starts and today might be the spot. On Approval can be expected to offer stout resistance to our choice. A top effort would that last distance test and should show to advantage with this caliber of competition.

Fourth race—It was in handy fashion that Founder accounted for his last race, and despite his added burden of 10 pounds he should be first home. Crowning Glory, second to our choice in their most recent engagement, again looms as the most formidable contender under the weight arrangeme...ts. Epibeau gave evidence of fitness in that last second.

Fifth race—Dnieper only needed that last race to ... on razor edge. Training move... have been very impressive and this company is not too severe. Jamboree is another which has gone through morning trials in a satisfactory manner and can be dangerous. Flag Cadet closed well in that 6½-furlong sprint, to be third, and should take kindly to this mile.

Sixth race—Move Faster, a good second in that last venture, should retain that good form to get the winner's share in the second turf race of the day. Red Roamer can do better than that last race indicates. On class this one must be figured. Silence III may favor a longer route, but should get up for the minor share.

Seventh race—First Pigeon turned in a creditable second in that last trip postward. He is again lightly burdened and should last longer. Homework just failed to get up in his dist... test but should benefit by the race to be troublesome to ou... choice.

Railroads Lift Steel Activity To Year's High

Car and Rail Purchases Raise Capacity to 52 Per Cent.

New York, Feba 5 (AP).—Iron Age stresses the importance of railroad buying in maintaining steel operations, in its weekly review published today.

"Railroad buying is largely responsible for a 1½-point increase in steel ingot output this week which lifted production to 52 per cent of capacity, the highest level of the year," the magazine said.

It was noted that output at Chicago, where orders for rail and car repair steel have been heaviest, rose 6½ points to 59 per cent of capacity.

Prospects for automotive buying were described as "drab." Severe weather, it was reported, had depressed sales of both new and used cars.

"The slight increase in steel specifications from the motor car builders which was noticed a week ago has subsided," the review said.

The Iron Age scrap composite rose to $13.67 a ton from $13.58 a ton last week. The composite price of finished steel declined from 2.130 cents a pound to 2.109 cents during the week.

Bank and Insurance Stocks at New Highs

New York, Feb. 5.—New York City bank stocks established a new high during January, according to Hoit, Rose & Troster. From the opening of 59.25 on January 2 the weighted average rose to establish the new 1936 high of 63.93 on January 14. This compares with the 1935 high of 62.06 on December 12, 1935, and is the highest level since October 4, 1932. From the new high, however, the average declined to the month's low of 56.68 on January 20. By the close of the month, the average recovered part of the loss, closing January 31 at 58.45.

Insurance stocks in the New York City market again reached new high levels during January. The weighted average of 20 issues opened the year at the low of 61.70 and established the new 1936 high of 64.56 on January 23. This is the highest level recorded by the average since April 6, 1931.

1935 Interest On Public Debt 2.55 Per Cent

Average Rate Drops From 2.96 Per Cent in Previous Year.

New York, Feb. 5.—The average rate of interest on the direct interest-bearing debt of the United States Government was 2.55 per cent at the end of 1935, compared with 2.96 per cent at the close of 1934, according to C. J. Devine & Co., Inc., specialists in United States Government securities, in the 1936 edition of their yearbook reviewing the financing operations of the Government. Total Government interest-bearing debt, both direct and guaranteed, increased $3.1 billion or 10 per cent in 1935, the study shows.

The total direct interest-bearing debt of the Government, as officially reported, increased to $29,596,328,978 from $27,944,034,650, a gain of $1,852,294,328 or 5.9 per cent during the year. In the same period annual interest requirements decreased 8.6 per cent and the average rate of interest dropped to 2.55 per cent.

Debt is 34.1 Billions.

In addition to the direct interest-bearing debt, there were outstanding on December 31, 1935, Government-guaranteed obligations of various corporations and credit agencies in the aggregate amount of about $4,527,288,832, compared with $3,078,806,442 at the close of 1934, an increase of $1,448,482,390 or about 47 per cent.

Accordingly, the combined interest-bearing debt, direct and guaranteed, amounted to $34,123,617,810. There were also outstanding matured debt on which interest has ceased and debt bearing no interest in a total amount of $960,995,085. New Treasury issues in the total amount of $12,468,917,388 were marketed during 1935.

Stocks Hold Strength in Active Trading; Government Bonds and Dollars Rally.

New York, Feb. 5.—Recovery in Government bonds, and a rally in dollars in the foreign markets showed that the markets were willing to pay face value for the President's implied promise to cut down spending. Stocks were not much distressed at the corollary of a fall in the inflationary tide. Prices generally advanced in moderately active trading. Turnover in stocks was around 2,900,000 shares. Commodities were mixed. Cotton continued under pressure of expectation of a larger crop this year. May wheat closed ⅜ of a cent higher at 99¾ cents a bushel.

Beside the coal stock group, the sugar shares, particularly the Cubans, were active and strong. Most stocks at the odd-lot post were actively bought. Odd-lot preferred issues moving up 1 to 6 points were: Byers, Cuban American, Fuller second and Fuller prior, General Steel, Market Street Railway, National Department, National Supply, Universal Pipe, Worthington A and Burns B.

Farm shares moved along to new high prices on the promise of good crops given by the extensive rains and snows. Miscellaneous stocks to act well were American Chain, Bayuk Cigars, Hayes Body, Lambert and Philip Morris. Western Union and American Telephone forged ahead, selling at the best prices in several years. General Gas held its activity. Steel was strong for a while and then marked time. Utilities were irregularly higher. Rails were irregular. New high prices were made by Central, D. & H., Lackawanna and Great Northern.

Oils were mixed and less active. Standard of California was a feature. Jersey was steady. In the motor group, Chrysler rose to a new high price since 1929, with a climb of nearly 2 points. Mack and White were buoyant. General Motors was firm. The accessories were strong.

Business Trends.

On the business side the markets had, if they cared for that sort of fare, a confident statement of Secretary Morgenthau that almost every line of business is improving. Some of the midweek statistics of trade were favorable. Leading railroads reported higher loadings for last week, the rise being 7 per cent over the preceding week, electrical production continued to climb and the steel reviews noted the increasing railroad orders and the firmer tone in the scrap market.

Extreme cold weather is helping some lines of business and hampering others. The coal industry is having a great spurt, the snows are insuring plenty of moisture for spring agriculture, heavy clothing sales are brisk. On the other hand transportation is suffering and consequently the consumption of goods in general. The swing in Washington away from the idea of an early lift in business and private income taxes is helpful, but the closing of the sanctions ring against Italy contains a threat of trouble abroad. Presumable if oil sanctions should be applied by the League of Nations, this country would follow suit.

Reassurance.

Making a virtue out of necessity with respect to the cotton, tobacco and potato control acts, in asking Congress for their repeal in order to head off further unfavorable Supreme Court decisions, and seizing the opportunity of reducing bookkeeping appropriations for money that it appears it won't be practicable to spend within the next few months, the Administration has succeeded for the moment in changing the complexion of the foreign exchange and the Government bond markets. Dollars and Treasury obligations rallied today, to the extent of shutting off for the present the gold exports to Europe, relieving the anxiety lest a large outflow of capital should take place from our security markets, and lifting the sales pressure (to say nothing of bank worries) from Government bonds.

Any step taken in the direction of reduced appropriations for any governmental department is praiseworthy, but the only practical good that can come is for the actual outlay of money to be lowered, and for it to be brought within a fair revenue limit. Even by broadening the base of the income taxes it is not likely that any large increase in tax revenues over those anticipated for this year will be possible. Budget balancing cannot in all probability be accomplished by means of current expenditures matched with any conceivable increase in tax revenues. The trick will have to be turned by bringing down the expenditures.

The Administration has yet to show its sincerity on that score. It may jockey the banks into position and press down money rates to points insuring reasonable success for new borrowing, but it cannot remove constant anxiety over its credit until a genuine change of policy comes about. It can have an inflationary boom in speculative markets, and it looks more and more as though one were coming.

Operations.

The days of the skilled market trader are by no means over. For several weeks a story of trading in Bellanca has been told to the SEC. Daily watchers of the ticker tape can see much evidence of other interesting operations, doubtless all within the law, but differing nevertheless little if any from the old familiar variety that so enchanted the public and enriched the professional traders a few years ago. A man who is by no means a long distance from the inside of Alleghany says of the sharp rise in the securities: "I can truly say that there are no plans of the Alleghany Corporation which are responsible for the sharp rise in the securities. I think the impulse has come entirely from outside sources and has not been entirely disassociated from some purposeful manipulation of the market carried on by New York interests." The daily spectacle of an initial sale of 20,000 to 30,000 shares in Cities Service on the Curb Exchange also looks a wee bit unreal to the uninitiated.

SEC.

Bank Margins.

The sub-committee of the Clearing House Committee, which has been working on recommendations to be made to the Federal Reserve Board on the matter of margins on bank loans to customers on securities collateral, has not suggested, in its report to the big committee, any fixed percentage of market or low value. It has favored the flat percentage basis of calculation of margins, and, from current gossip, it recommends that bank requirements be in conformity with those applied to brokers. No attempt has been made to create preferential advantages for banks over brokers or vice versa. There is a strong recommendation that unlisted or unregistered securities in bank loan portfolios shall not be discriminated against, and also a proposal that the board exempt from regulation a large volume of banking transactions which by their nature have no relation whatever to securities speculation or credit employed for speculative purposes. James H. Perkins, chairman of the clearing house committee and chairman of the National City Bank, said today the clearing house committee would meet on Friday afternoon to consider the sub-committee's report.

Shipbuilding Tonnage Gains 35% in Year

U. S. Increase a Third as Germany's Production Is Trebled.

New York, Feb. 5.—Nearly 35 per cent advance in the total tonnage of merchant vessels launched throughout the world in 1935, as compared with 1934, is shown by a statement issued today by Lloyds Register of Shipping, covering all vessels of 100 gross tons each and upwards for all countries except Russia, for which returns are not available.

The aggregate of 1,302,080 tons launched during 1935 was 335,000 tons in excess of the figure for 1934, and the highest recorded since 1931, when the total was 1,617,000 tons. The 1935 aggregate, however, is over two million tons less than in the last pre-war year, 1913.

Only two of the ten leading maritime countries of the world failed to show an increase over the 1934 figure. These were Japan and Italy. Their declines were slight, however, that for Japan being only 6,500 tons, and for Italy about 4,000 tons. On the other hand, Germany launched more than three times as much tonnage as she did in 1934, France two and a half times, and Sweden and Denmark about twice as much.

Gain for United States.

For Great Britain and Ireland, however, the gain was only slightly in excess of 10 per cent. There were somewhat larger proportional gains for Holland and Norway; while the United States showed an increase of about one-third. Great Britain and Ireland, Germany, Japan, Denmark and Sweden were the only ones to launch over 100,000 tons.

The comparison of tonnage launched in Great Britain and Ireland, the United States, and the other maritime countries taken as a group, is shown for the last two years by Lloyds Register in the following table, the figures representing gross tons:

| | 1935. | 1934. |
|---|---|---|
| Great Britain & Ireland | 466,011 | 416,977 |
| United States | 32,867 | 24,521 |
| Other countries | 770,442 | 442,917 |
| World total | 1,302,080 | 967,415 |

ACCORDION

. . . the easiest of all Instruments to Play

★ Everywhere the popularity of this fascinating instrument is growing by leaps and bounds! Two years ago you seldom saw one—now you see them everywhere in orchestras, bands, on the stage, at private parties, etc.—everywhere people gather. Why not learn to play yourself? It's very easy with our simplified method of instruction—average students play popular music after only 20 lessons! And best of all the cost is nominal—$1.10 weekly pays for both the accordion and the PRIVATE lessons. All you have to do is come in, make arrangements for the lessons, pay for a few weeks in advance and we give you the accordion (in case).

County Suit Postponed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Berryville, Va., Feb. 5.—A 30-day extension has been granted attorneys in the case of the Clarke County Board of Supervisors against the town of Berryville to test the constitutionality of a provision in the town's charter which affects the payment of county taxes by the citizens of the town.

Some years ago the original charter by which Berryville citizens paid the full county levy was changed to provide for partial exemption. The county subsequently contended that the altered charter is unconstitutional.

4 Police Deny Crime Version Of Editor's Wife

Twin City Vice Conditions Attacked at Liggett Murder Trial.

By the Associated Press.

Minneapolis, Feb. 5.—Four Minneapolis policemen testified in the defense of Isadore (Kid Cann) Blumenfeld today as counsel for the former bootlegger attempted to shatter Mrs. Edith Liggett's identification of "The Kid" as the grinning slayer of her husband, Walter Liggett.

Two of the officers gave testimony contradicting in part that given by the widow concerning what she did and said immediately after the assassination of the Midwest American newspaper publisher with a machine gun, December 9.

Simultaneously, Red Pike, assistant State's attorney general, intimated he would seek to ascertain how the defense obtained police records of investigating officers' reports on the crime. These reports, he brought out in cross-examination, were not written until three days after the slaying.

Liggett, in his publication, attacked Blumenfeld and vice conditions, and flayed what he termed political influence in the police department and the latter's laxity in enforcing the law.

Testimony of Patrolmen Richard Miller and Ralph Jacobsen varied from that given by Mrs. Liggett on three points; the type of car used by the killer, whether the alley was dark or light, and the identity of the other occupant of the slayer's automobile.

"When I arrived there," related Patrolman Miller, "Mrs. Liggett was bending over her husband's prone body. She was more or less hysterical and was saying, 'Why don't someone do something, where are the police, where are the doctors? Kid Cann murdered my husband. Kid Cann murdered my husband.'"

The alley was "quite dark," Miller said, adding the lights on the Liggett automobile were not burning. Mrs. Liggett previously testified the alley was not dark and the lights on the car were burning.

Jacobsen testified Mrs. Liggett told him the killer's car was a light coupe. When she was on the stand she denied this, insisting it was either a coach or sedan.

"I asked her if she recognized anyone in the car," he added, "and she said, 'Kid Cann. Schuldberg was sitting right next to him.'"

The widow also has denied she ever claimed Meyer Schuldberg, president of Chesapeake Brands, Inc., liquor firm, was identified by her. Blumenfeld is a salesman for Schuldberg's company.

Olson Given Challenge.

Minneapolis, Feb. 5 (AP).—A. B. Gilbert, of Mound, former candidate for Governor, in a statement today challenged Gov. Floyd B. Olson to "name the men who, he holds, incited Mrs. Walter W. Liggett to make various statements reflecting upon me."

"Since he has asked for it," said Gilbert, who accompanied Liggett up until ten minutes before the editor's death, "I challenge the Governor to name the men. In my opinion, there are no such men."

Gov. Olson, in a statement yesterday replying to testimony by Mrs. Liggett in the trial of Isadore Blumenfeld, declared some of her statements were inspired by politicians who oppose him. She testified she believed "Gov. Olson's gang either ordered or permitted" the slaying of her husband.

The Governor said he would name the politicians if necessary.

Woman Held in Default of $6,500 Bail; 70 Others Before Grand Jury.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 5.—An extraordinary grand jury sifted through a maze of commercialized vice racketeering today while the Federal Government contributed a prisoner from Park avenue to the clean-up campaign.

Mrs. Mae Scheible, arrested in her Park avenue apartment by Department of Justice agents, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter on a charge of inducing a Pittsburgh girl to come to New York for immoral purposes.

Mrs. Scheible, described by Federal agents as a former associate of "Count" Victor Lustig, notorious counterfeiter now in jail, was held in $6,500 bond.

Government men said she operated disorderly houses on a grand scale, charging as much as $1,000 for a visit to one of her establishments. When Assistant United States Attorney J. Howard Carter fixed her 1933 income at $80,000, she pelitely demurred.

"I beg your pardon," she said, "I made that money in the liquor business."

Meanwhile more than a score of the 70 women rounded up as material witnesses in a series of week-end raids were questioned by assistants of Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey before a "blue ribbon" grand jury.

Dewey indicated he would seek indictments against 11 alleged ringleaders of the vice clique, now in custody.

Supreme Court Justice Aaron J. Levy refused to accept a tenement house equity as security because the property carried two mortgages. Counsel for the defendant, in turn, refused to accept a suggestion that his client's mink coat, valued at $5,000, be offered. He said he would have the cash by tomorrow.

Repeal Now Favored By Oklahoma Governor

Oklahoma City, Feb. 5 (AP).—E. W. Marland, Governor of one of the eight remaining bone-dry States, threw his support to repeal tonight and bitterly denounced the bootlegger.

"The bootlegger has been getting all the revenue and should be put out of business," he said, in favoring a proposed Oklahoma constitutional amendment for outright repeal.

Next-door-neighbor Kansas, North Dakota and the Southern States of Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina and Tennessee are the other dry commonwealths.

Harllee Branch, Second Assistant Postmaster General, in announcing the decision of the Postoffice Department at a press conference, explained that the department has no alternative in view of the plan of the Commerce Department to close the airport for reasons of public safety.

"There is nothing else for us to do," he said. "Bolling Field is out of the question, as there is scarcely room for military planes."

He said that the transfer of air mail operations to Baltimore will cost the Government and the air lines thousands of dollars because equipment will have to be moved. Moreover, the change will be a source of great inconvenience and delay to the Postoffice Department and the public.

Solomon, while explaining that the four air lines stopping at Washington Airport are puzzled as to their future plans, said that if operations are moved to Baltimore passengers and air mail will consume more time in making the trip to the starting point than they will save by flying to Eastern cities.

Train Equal to Plane.

"On a trip to New York, for instance," he said, "a passenger will be able to go by train to New York from Washington as quickly and with less inconvenience than by train to Baltimore and then by plane to New York."

Fifty-six passenger planes now make stops at Washington Airport every 24 hours. Thirty-two of them belong to Eastern Air Lines, 10 to American Air Lines, 8 to Pennsylvania and 6 to Central. The two latter lines also make their terminals here.

The National Capital and the United States Government will become "laughing stock," Branch said, if it is deprived of an airport. This Nation is now the only major country without a National airport at its capital, and Washington Airport ranks with the 10 largest flying fields in the Nation in the amount of business done.

Solomon pointed out that neither the War Department nor Arlington County has sought to maintain Military road despite the county's insistence that it remain open.

"The road is in terrible condition now," he said. "The only repairs have been done by the airport and that was only after I had broken a spring on one of the holes."

He explained that the Washington Airport has no alternative but to withdraw the highway guards of February 15, because of the War Department's request that the Justice Department institute proceedings to force the airport to remove any equipment it has placed on the road.

"We have been looking for some soldiers to turn up over here most any time," he said.

Meanwhile, Arlington County gave no indication of back-tracking in its demand that Military road be maintained or that a substitute highway be built. Representative Smith said he would stand behind the county board.

The Arlington County board will meet today in special session to consider the problem.

In order to eliminate any complicating features, McSwain struck out of his resolution the provisions authorizing the Secretary of War to quitclaim the road to Arlington County or Virginia or to lease it to Washington Airport.

"The disposal of the highway can be worked out after the emergency is past," he said.

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

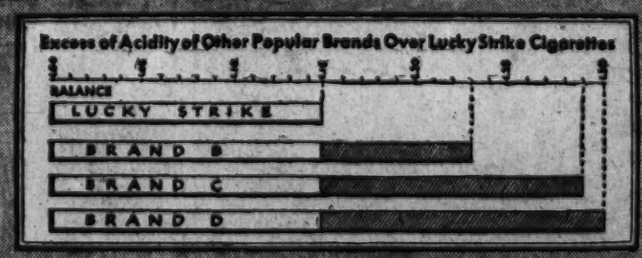
Luckies are less acid

Recent chemical tests show* that other popular brands have an excess of acidity over Lucky Strike of from 53% to 100%.

*RESULTS VERIFIED BY INDEPENDENT CHEMICAL LABORATORIES AND RESEARCH GROUPS



All kinds of people choose Luckies, each for reasons of his own. But everyone agrees that Luckies are A Light Smoke of rich, ripe-bodied tobacco. It is a rather surprising fact that the leaves of the same tobacco plant may vary far more than the leaves from plants of quite different types. Chemical analysis shows that the top leaves contain excess alkalies which tend to give a harsh, alkaline taste. The bottom leaves tend to acidity in the smoke. It is only the center leaves which approach in Nature the most palatable, acid-alkaline balance. In Lucky Strike Cigarettes, the center leaves are used.
